

PR
2294
H7d
1905

A
A 0 0 0
3
4
5
4 9
1
5

UC SOUTH WESTERN LIBRARY FACULTY

UNIVERSITY OF CALIFORNIA
AT LOS ANGELES

Digitized by the Internet Archive in 2008 with funding from Microsoft Corporation

<http://www.archive.org/details/howellsdevises00howe>

Tudor & Stuart Library
Vol. I: Howell's Devises

Henry Frowde, M.A.
Publisher to the University of Oxford
London, Edinburgh, New York and Toronto

Howell's Devises

1581

With an Introduction
by Walter Raleigh

At the Clarendon Press

MCMVI

UNIVERSITY OF CALIFORNIA
AND ANNOTATED LIBRARY

Oxford
Printed at the Clarendon Press
By Horace Hart, M.A.
Printer to the University

PA
2304
H7 2
1865

MS 11-22-20

10/2/33

Re ed

A C B

Introduction.

THOMAS HOWELL, the author of this volume of verse, belonged to that scattered company of amateurs—gentlemen adventurers, soldiers of fortune, and students of the Inns of Court—who maintained the traditions of English poetry in the barren years between the death of Surrey and the rise of Spenser. It was a time of preparation rather than achievement. The mind of the nation was preoccupied with religious controversy and rumours of war. A multitude of translators were labouring to bring English readers acquainted with the masterpieces of ancient and modern literature. The drama was alive with experiment, every year contriving some new thing for the approval of the learned or the delight of the populace. At the Court and the Universities imitations of Seneca and Plautus were presented by young gentlemen of parts. In the open spaces around London, in the town-halls or inn-yards of the provinces, and in the country-houses of the nobility, wandering companies of gentlemen's servants exercised, in interludes and farces, the unchanging comic art of the mimic and the buffoon. Poetry, aiming at a like popularity, appealed to the people in the hobbling narratives of the ballad-singers, the agricultural ditties of Thomas Tusser, and the sacred psalmody of Sternhold and Hopkins. Yet the refined and gallant school of Surrey, whose amorous songs, used in the Court of Henry VIII, had scandalized Thomas Sternhold, was not without loyal disciples. It was in the school of Surrey that the great poets of the Elizabethan age learned the elements of their craft. Sackville and Gascoigne, Churchyard and Turberville, Edwardes and Hunnis, Phaer and Golding, the Lord Vaux and the Earl of Oxford, although none of their works ascends the highest heaven of invention, showed the way to greater poets than themselves. If Thomas Howell deserves

208608

Introduction.

deserves to be rescued from oblivion, it is because he too belonged to this company of heralds, and his imperfect work is full of presages of the great things that were to come.

The building of regular theatres in London, and their capture by the University wits and poets, opened a new career to men of letters. By supplying the booksellers with novelettes, and the theatre with plays, a poet might hope to support himself when patronage failed him. Greene, and Shakespeare, and not a few of their contemporaries, gained the best part of their living by their pens. Howell belongs to an earlier time, when the writing of verse was a strictly honorary employment, and patronage was its justification and reward. We know nothing of his life save what we can gather from the tributes he pays to those in whose service it was passed. Like Keats, whom he does not much resemble in other respects, he had not the slightest feeling of humility towards the public. His verses were written 'for his own exercise and his friends' pleasure.' He commemorates many of his private friends in the verses which he exchanged with them, but, as few of them were notable or famous persons, their names help us but little. R. Hussie and T. Hooper, Henry Lassels, M. Staplee, and J. Nedham must rest content with such fame as may accrue to them from the mention of their names in one or other of the three small volumes of poetry which Howell produced during his life-time. Francis Flower, who is mentioned in The Arbor of Amicitie, Howell's first collection of poems, is perhaps the Francis Flower who was elected Demy of Magdalen College, Oxford, in 1560, and Fellow in 1565. A. M., who contributes to the Devises, is perhaps Anthony Munday. John Keper, with whom Howell exchanged many poems, has been identified with a gentleman of Somerset who was entered at Hart Hall, Oxford, in 1564, 'aged seventeen or thereabouts,' and subsequently lived in the Close at Wells. A poem included in The Arbor of Amicitie, under the title 'The Opinion he hath of his Friend absent,' is perhaps addressed to Keper, and gives us our only clue to Howell's place of birth :

Loe

Introduction.

Loe what mishap hath maymed me so sore,
Like one of thine that there I may not dwell:
Esteeme me not the less of Dunster store,
Since hart is there where care doth corps expell.

These obscure lines have been interpreted by Dr. Grosart to mean that Howell and his friend were both natives of Dunster, a conjecture which receives some support from the occurrence in The Arbor of Amitie of a poem in the West-country dialect. A further vague allusion, occurring in another poem of the same volume, may possibly refer to Oxford. In 'A farewell to his Friend T. Hooper,' Howell writes—

If will were now in force,
To thee my flight should be:
Where are the Muses nine that sing
In heavenly harmonie.

Born, it may be, in Somerset, and educated, it seems likely, in Oxford, Thomas Howell comes into clearer light as a retainer of the noble family of Herbert. In 1562 the Lady Anne Herbert, daughter of William Earl of Pembroke, was married to Francis, Lord Talbot, the eldest son of George, sixth Earl of Shrewsbury, who acted for fifteen arduous years as custodian of Mary Queen of Scots. Not long after the marriage Howell is found in the Lady Anne's retinue. In the dedication of his first book to her he says: 'But now (right honourable Ladie) I have by experience proved of myselfe, being in your daylie presence, the fame of your worthiness and virtues to be certain true, which eftsoons before I had heard reported by others.' In 1566 Gertrude, Countess of Shrewsbury, died, and was mourned by Howell in an epitaph which is printed in The Arbor of Amitie (1568). About the time that Howell was revising his epitaph for the press, the bereaved Earl fell a victim to the charms of Bess of Hardwick, daughter and co-heir of John Hardwick of Hardwick. This celebrated and single-minded woman was now in her third widowhood, having been married successively to Robert Barlow of Derbyshire;
Sir

Introduction.

Sir William Cavendish of Chatsworth ; and Sir William St. Loe, Captain of the Guard to Queen Elizabeth. All the later part of her life was devoted to the aggrandizement of the children whom she had borne to Sir William Cavendish. When one of the wealthiest and most powerful of English earls proffered her marriage she was not slow to recognize that the chance of her life had come. Before yielding to his suit she drove a hard bargain, stipulating for a double marriage of their children. In February 1567-8 Henry, the eldest son of Sir William Cavendish, took to wife the Lady Grace Talbot, and Gilbert, the second son of the Earl of Shrewsbury, married the youngest of Sir William's daughters. Last of all Bess was married also, and entered with zeal into the administration of the Talbot estates.

In the service of this family the gentleman-retainer of the Lady Anne must have passed many years of his life. The Earl of Shrewsbury had three daughters, all of whom their poet celebrates in the poem called 'A New Yeares Gyfte' (Devises, pp. 77-9). The eldest, the Lady Katherine Talbot, was married to Henry Herbert, Earl of Pembroke ; so that the Herbert family, like the family of Cavendish, was connected with the Talbots by more than one marriage. The second daughter, the Lady Mary Talbot, was married to Sir George Savile, of Thornhill, Yorkshire. The third, the Lady Grace, as already narrated, was married to the heir of Sir William Cavendish. When the Lady Katherine died, Howell bemoaned her in verse (Devises, pp. 36-8), and he seems thereafter to have renewed his service to his original patrons of the house of Pembroke. In his poem called 'Helpe best welcome, when most needeful' (Devises, p. 51) he tells how his own kin had failed him :

And he that hath and should by nature ayde
Withdrawes his hande, and sayth he may no more.

The Devises, his volume of 1581, is dedicated to the Lady Mary, Countess of Pembroke, and contains, in the lines 'Written to a most excellent Booke, full of rare invention,' the earliest extant notice of Sir Philip Sidney's

Arcadia

Introduction.

Arcadia. The Arcadia was not printed till 1590, but Howell had doubtless seen it in manuscript at Wilton. His allusions to its 'fild phrase' and 'choice conceits,' to its lovers and shepherds, to the wisdom of its author,

Whose prime of youth grave deeds of age displaies, and to its very title—The Countess of Pembroke's Arcadia—make the reference unmistakable. In a short poem (Devises, p. 30) he celebrates the motto of the Pembroke family—Ung je servirey. Under the protection of that family Howell ended, as he had begun, his career of authorship. When and where he died we do not know.

The titles of his books are as follows:—

The Arbor of Amitie, wherein is comprised pleasant Poems and pretie Poesies, set forth by Thomas Howell Gentleman. London, Henry Denham, 1568.

Newe Sonets, and pretie Pamphlets, Written by Thomas Howell, Gentelman. Newly augmented, corrected and amended. London, Thomas Colwell. Undated, but licensed 1567–8.

H. His Devises, for his owne exercise and his Friends pleasure. London, H. Jackson, 1581.

There is only a single copy known of each of these volumes: the Newe Sonets and pretie Pamphlets is in the Capell Collection, Cambridge; the other two are in the Bodleian. All three were reprinted in his Occasional Issues by Dr. Grosart (1879).

The Devises, here reprinted, is the latest, and, on the whole, the best, of Howell's books of verse. He included in it a certain number of pieces from his two earlier volumes, with numerous alterations and amendments, bearing witness to the care and pains which he spent upon his work.

Howell's masters and guides in poetry were Surrey and Wyatt, and the group of courtly makers who acknowledged them for leaders. The book of Songes and Sonettes, printed by Richard Tottel in the year 1557, was his handbook of English verse. From this book he borrowed many of his his themes and the better part of his metrical effects. Here, for instance, in Tottel's Songes and Sonettes, thought and phrase are interwoven in a melody which is re-echoed through all the lyrical collections of the sixteenth century:

Introduction.

Come, gentle death, the ebbe of care,
The ebbe of care, the flood of lyfe,
The flood of lyfe, the joyfull fare,
The joyfull fare, the end of strife:
The end of strife, that thing wishe I:
Wherefore come death, and let me dye.

Howell practises the same device of iteration in such pieces as 'No greater contrariety, then in the passions of Love' (Devises, p. 16), or 'Ever sought, never founde' (Devises, p. 48):

The more I strive, the stronger is my thrall,
The stronger thrall, the weaker still mine ayde:
The weaker ayde, the greater griefe doth fall,
The greater griefe, the more with doubt dismay.

Certain of his poems, like some of those in Tottel's Miscellany, irresistibly suggest the accompaniment of a stringed instrument. So 'To his Lady of her doubtfull aunswere' (Devises, p. 50):

'Twixt death and doubtfulnessse,
'Twixt paine and pensivenesse,
'Twixt Hell and heavynesse,
Rests all my carefulnesse.

And he abounds in the stock conceits and antitheses which Petrarch taught to a multitude of French and English pupils:

Still pynde in colde, I parched am with heate,
As fyre I flye, upon the flame I runne:
In swelting gleames, my chylly corps I beate,
Congealde to Ice, where shynes the clearest sunne,
Loe thus I lyve, and lyving thus I dye,
Drownde in dispayre, with hope advaunced hye.

(Devises, p. 48.)

There

Introduction.

There is none of the pleasure of surprise in these time-honoured paradoxes; no man could possibly imagine that he had found them for himself. Hot and cold, lost and found, rich and poor, hard and soft, heavy and light, kind and cruel, false and true, living and dead, up and down, to and fro—these are the simple contrasts presented by Petrarch to his followers, and used by them to express the bewilderment of love and the sorrows of unstable Fortune. It was no part of the poet's business to seek for new comparisons; his art was sufficiently approved by the deftness with which he handled the old, and wove them into gracious patterns.

It is one of the great merits of Surrey and Wyatt that they led the way back to those authentic fires whence their own light was borrowed. Chaucer and Petrarch, largely by their means, became the great masters of the English poets of the sixteenth century. George Gascoigne acknowledges no other. 'I venture my good will,' he says,

' In barren verse to do the best I can,
Like Chaucer's boy, and Petrarch's journeyman.'

The poems of Petrarch were issued in innumerable editions, and studied by many English poets. Sir John Harington, writing news of the Court to his lady, in 1602, asks her for the book that was his daily reading: 'Send me up, by my man Combe, my Petrarch. Adieu, sweet Mall.' Reminiscences of Petrarch are to be found on every other page of Howell's poems, and the famous Sonnet 88—S'amor non è,—translated by Chaucer in Troilus and Cressida, is translated again by Howell in the Devises ('Of Love,' p. 36). Howell's last published verses, to be found in J. Swan's translation of the tract De Antichristo (1589), are three renderings of Petrarch's invectives against the Court of Rome.

As for Chaucer, his was the paramount influence in all the versifying and story-telling of Shakespeare's predecessors. Howell borrows phrase after phrase from him. For instance—

'Tis

Introduction.

'Tis light t'outrunne, but not to outread the wise,
says Howell (Devises, p. 88).

Men may the wyse at-renne, and not at-rede, says Chaucer (Troilus, iv. 1456). Again—

My taste of love is lost, as you may gesse,
That know how sick men savour bitternesse,
says Howell (Devises, p. 89).

For thou of love hast lost thy taste, I gesse,
As sick man hath of swete and bitternesse, says Chaucer (Parlement of Foules, l. 160). The reading of Chaucer's works, set forth in a new and complete edition by William Thynne in the year 1532, caught the imagination of the poets at the Court of Queen Anne Boleyn, and furnished them with half their lore. It was in this volume that Howell read the story of Cressida, with its moral sequel, written by Robert Henryson and long attributed to Chaucer. Howell's poem 'Ruine the rewarde of Vice' (Devises, p. 18) points the moral of the story once again, in the stanza made famous by Chaucer. His conclusion is modelled, not on Henryson's poem, which ends with a grim epitaph, but on the half-passionate, half-humorous rhetoric wherewith Chaucer rounds his tale of love and perjury. It is a testimony to the greatness of Chaucer that he is loved by many who never tasted the delicacy of his irony. Howell echoes his cadences, but makes them the vehicle of flat sermonizing :

Loe here the end of foule defyled lyfe,
Loe here the fruite that sinne both sowes and reapes :
Loe here of Vice the right rewarde and knyfe,
That cuttes of cleane and tumbleth downe in heapes
All such as tread Dame Cressid's cursed steppes :
Take heed therefore how you your pryme do spende,
For Vice brings plagues, and Vertue happy ende.

With

Introduction.

With Chaucer and Petrarch, Surrey and Wyatt, to study and imitate, Howell is well furnished as a tolerable minor poet. But he was touched also by later influences, and his verses bear witness to his interest in the literature of his own time. In one of his poems (Devises, p. 33), anticipating Shakespeare, he likens the life of man to a stage-play. In another (Devises, p. 92) he borrows from Gascoigne (The Arraignement of a Lover) an elaborate parable of a Law-court and the trial of a prisoner. His poem 'Discorde makes weake, what concorde left stronge' (Devises, p. 91) is probably a reminiscence of one of the dumb-shows interpolated in the fashionable tragedy of Gorboduc. He is never very happy with his borrowings, and it would be vain to attempt to claim for him a place among notable English poets. He is an average and typical Elizabethan rhymers, of fair accomplishments, one of a great multitude of pleasant sonneteering young gentlemen who practised poetry as an added social grace. Like a true Elizabethan, he uses a high-wrought and conceited style to express the every-day conclusions of sound sense and homely wisdom. 'I scorn and spue out,' says E. K., in his introductory epistle to The Shepheards Calendar, 'the rakehelly rout of our ragged rymers (for so themselves use to hunt the letter) which without learning boste, without judgement jangle, without reason rage and fome, as if some instinct of poeticall spirite had newly ravished them above the meannesse of common capacitie.' In his enthusiasm for Spenser, E. K. would no doubt have scorned and spued out Howell (who is much given to alliteration) along with the rest of the rout. But we who live in a later time, when the country is no longer 'pestered with infinite fardles of printed pamphlets tending in some respect to poetry,' can afford to pass a milder judgement. For us the value of Howell's faded finery is that it reminds us of that many-coloured world of music and idleness, and gallantry and romance, where the great Elizabethan poets had their nurture. Howell is one of the choristers of the days of Shakespeare's youth, when 'wild music burdened every bough,' when lutes and gitterns hung in

Introduction.

in every barber's shop for the use of the customers, and when every gentleman could bear his part in a glee or madrigal. The ordinaries of London and the aisles of St. Paul's were frequented by young gallants who wore their fortunes on their backs, and stuffed their heads with legends and fantasies. Guiscard and Gismunda, Luna and Endymion, Troilus and Cressida, were the saints of their idolatry. Every noble family maintained its journeyman versifier. If Howell deserves to be remembered as a poet, it is because there were hundreds like him, and because Shakespeare gained the better part of his education not on the benches of an academy, but at the court, and in the tavern, and on the street.

The poetry that dressed itself in these new Italianate trappings of far-fetched form and phrase was old-fashioned and rustic at heart. The squire's or farmer's son might make himself glorious in courtly apparel, but his wisdom of life was the wisdom of the ancient homestead; and his speech was 'full of wise saws and modern instances.' The Euphuism of Lyly is a compound of all that is extravagant in expression with all that is homely and commonplace in thought. Howell's work, like Lyly's, is a mine of popular proverbs, which he utters not without a certain air of pride, as if they were the gains of his own experience. His message to his age is the message of Polonius :

That lyfe is lyke a Bubble blowne, or smoke that soone doth passe,
That all our pleasures are but paynes, our glorie brittle glasse,
That Fortune's frutes are variable, no holde in Princely mace,
That women's myndes are mutable, that death drawes on apace;
That worldly pompe is vanity, that youth unwares decayes,
That high estate is slipperie, that onely vertue stayes. (Devises, p. 11.)

His adages are scattered over his pages with a lavish hand. He offers to his patrons and friends wholesome advice, fresh from the country, where it is held in high esteem.

Count not the birds that undisclosed be,

he

Introduction.

he says, translating the common lore of the country-side into the magniloquence of scholarly diction. From him we learn that—

Not all that glistereth biight may bear the name of gold ;
that—

Wante makes the olde wyfe trot, the yong to run outright ;
that—

Neede hath no lawe, some say ; extremes, extremes doe urge ;
that—

The Cat would faine eat fishe, yet loth her foot to wet ;
and he takes to himself credit for promulgating these humble truths, which might have perished from the neglect of the great :

Feare not (quoth Hope) to shewe thy wylling will,
(Smale seedes sometyme may light on gratefull grounde :)
If none had wrote but Clarks of TULLIES skill,
Sweete sawes had suncke, which now aftore are founde ;
Then cast of dread, dispayre no whyt at all,
Diseases great are cured with medicins small.

For all the triteness of his matter, Howell has some command over diverse forms of verse. In these pages are to be found the popular Chaucerian stanza, which Shakespeare used in The Rape of Lucrece, the six-lined stanza of Venus and Adonis, and a large variety of lyrical measures, including (Devises, p. 23) a song set to the refrain 'All of green Willow' which was made immortal by Shakespeare. The poem called A Dreame (Devises, p. 80) is written in a Quatorzain stanza the invention of which has commonly been attributed to Alexander Montgomerie, who used it in his poem of The Cherrie and the Slae. The Devises were published some sixteen years earlier than Montgomerie's poem, but the clumsiness and imperfection of Howell's handling of the metre show that he was not the inventor of the stanza. Perhaps it came to him from Scotland in the retinue

Introduction.

retinue of Queen Mary ; perhaps both Montgomerie and Howell are copying, with very different degrees of metrical skill, from some unknown original. In any case, here is the first appearance in print of a metre which gave Montgomerie a great part of his fame, and which was used by Burns in the Jolly Beggars. Further, the Sonnet, as Howell practises it, has the arrangement of rhymes and the cadences which are found in the Sonnets of Shakespeare, and in hardly any of the Sonnets of his contemporaries.

Without any claim, then, to be an artist in verse, Howell shows himself alert in the business of noting and imitating new-found measures. If his thoughts are not equally novel, that is not always a fault in poetry. Most of the great poetry of the world contains no original or surprising turns of thought, but gives perfect expression to ideas that are the common property of mankind. In this matter of expression Howell was earnest enough, continually amending and altering his epithets and phrases. But, after all, he is an apprentice, and no master ; his merits are derivative, and he has set no stamp of his own on the plastic language that he handled. He who walks in the sun (to apply to him one of the proverbs that he loved) must needs be sun-burnt ; and he who has the music of ancient poets ringing in his ears, must needs, in singing, hit upon some of their tunes. There is store enough, in these ‘ Delightful Discourses,’ of good poetic material, some of which was put to nobler uses by later and better artificers. In ‘ Bewtie the bayte of Vanitie ’ Howell discourses on the text of not a few of Shakespeare’s Sonnets, and anticipates Shakespeare’s sentiments :

Yet Time on face so faire shall furrows plow,
And writhed wrinkles peer on blemisht brow.

So two of the lines run in The Arbor of Amitie. Howell was not satisfied with them, and in the Devises he substitutes ‘ polisht forme ’ for ‘ face so faire.’ And then the same idea fell to be expressed by a great poet :

Time

Introduction.

Time doth transfix the flourish set on youth,
And delves the parallels on beauty's brow.

(SHAKESPEARE, Sonnet lx.)

Amend and polish as he might, Howell could not write like this. To treat him to another of his proverbs, it was his to beat about the bush, while others caught the birds. In the dramatic soliloquy of the betrayed and deserted girl (Devises, p. 64) there is an anticipation of some of the finest things in The Affliction of Margaret. The sense of friendlessness, and the fear of natural sights and sounds, to which Wordsworth has given high imaginative expression, is conceived with less energy by Howell, and is expressed, not without a certain grace of fancy, in the terms of a conventional mythology.

At strife to whom I might Commit my secret tears,
My heart the mountains' sight
And hollow Echo fears.

I doubt the Dryades
Amidst the forest chace,
And thinking on the Seas,
I dread the Mermaids' grace.

What shall I trust the Skies?
Then me the Winds bewray;
Poor soul, whom Jove denies
Each captive doth betray.

There is some gift of imagination in this; and those students of poetry who can take pleasure even in undistinguished verse when it bears an accidental likeness to some of the great poetry of the world, will not be intolerant of Thomas Howell. If he is not loved for himself, he will be entertained in the name of his family, the poets of the age of Elizabeth. A modest apology for him might be entered in the words of one of those extemporary

Introduction.

extemporary rhymes wherewith Richard Tarlton, the father of low comedians, was wont to delight his audience in the earliest London theatres :

This one, perchance, you might know
By his dress and his shape,
(Squeaking, gibbering, of every degree :)
Is a poet : or, if he's not so,
He's a poet's ape :
(He comes of a rare witty family.)

This edition is an exact reprint of the Bodleian copy of the Devises. About a dozen obvious and trivial misprints (such as the printing of a full stop between the subject and the predicate of a short sentence) have been corrected. Others, to avoid the intrusion of anything like conjectural emendation, have been left standing.

WALTER RALEIGH.

OXFORD, 1906.

H.
His Deuifes, for his owne exercise, and his Friends pleasure.

(··)

Vincit qui patitur.

 Imprinted at London, in Fleetestreate, beneath the Conduite, at the signe of the Saint Iohn Euangelist, by H.
Iackfon.

ANNO. 1581.

☛ To the Right Honorable, and most vertuous Lady, the Lady Marye

Countesse of Pembroke.

THE LITTLE POET ACCIUS NOT knowing which way to couer the smalenesse of hys person, which was somewhat lesse then the meane, thought best to haue a great picture drawne for hys Counterfeyte: This Poet no doubt had some meaning in this deuise, for pictures often go there, where the person(s) whom they represent are not admitted: And it might be that strangers seeing the great shape, would imagine Accius to be a tall man. Tewcer a cunning Archer, but a faynte harted Souldiour, then wanted no courage when he was close couered with the Target of his brother Aiax. Vlisses, whose rype wyt made full amends for his weake body, thought no aduerture dangerous, though neuer so perillous, if he were protected with the shield of Pallas. So I right Noble Ladye knowing my abilitie to wryte, to bee farre lesse then the person of Accius, and so more lykely to incurre more rebukes: my courage therfore more faynte then eyther Tewcers, or Vlisses, and so more needing some strong defence, haue aduertured to place in the forefront of this little treatise, the tytle of your name, as a great portrature to a little body, as a sure shield to a weake Warriour, as a safe defence against any danger. For as they which should see the picture of Accius, would imagine it to aunswere his person: so if the Reader hereof, behold your name in the fyrst leafe, he will deeme the whole Booke the more fruitfull, and the framer therof the more skilfull: but if he shall once perceyue your Honor to be Patronesse to this labour, he will eyther loue it, bicause he doth honor you, or wil not dare to reproch it, bicause he perceyueth you are as ready, and knoweth you are as able to defend it, as eyther Aiax was to garde Tewcer, or Pallas to guyde Vlisses. I cannot right vertuous Ladye, imagine there was anye greater cause that might induce Accius to frame so bigge a picture: or cause Aiax to shielde Tewcer: or mooue Pallas to regarde the safety of Vlisses: then my selfe

The Epistle.

now haue to vie your Honors defence. Accius his picture might with a stranger couer the shortnesse of his person: your name shall to the Reader be recompence for the greatnesse of my ignorance. Tewcer fled to Ajax because he was his owne brother: I presume to seeke ayde of your Honor, because I am your poore seruant. Pallas did defende Vlisses because shee knewe he followed and loued her: Your Ladiship (I trust) wyll be my protection, because I honor and serue you, which I haue done in tymes past, now doe, and euer hereafter wil do, in such sorte, that the worlde should be wytnesse, if my abilitie to shew it, were as great as my wil is ready to performe it, I would be found equal in dutiful zeale towards your Honor, to Vlisses in hartly affection towards Pallas. Therefore right Noble Lady, let me be bold to remember you in behalfe of my self, of that which Demosthenes is reported to haue spoken to Alexander, in defence of the Athenians. You haue (sayd he) most worthy Emperour, by fortune no greater good then that you maye: by nature no better gifte then that you wishe to doe good to many. The credite and estimation your vertuous lyfe, and rare wisdome hath procured you: the honorable curtesie and sweete behaiour wherewith Nature hath plentifully endued you, shal not be cyther vnfitly or vnfruitfully vsed, if you shal vouchsafe to imploy the one in defence, and shew the other in good acceptance of this slender worke of your seruant, which as I did wryte at ydle times in your house, to auoyde greater ydlenesse or worse businesse: so I present it humbly vnto you, as a testimony of my bounden dutie, euer crauing your

Honor to pardon my bolde presumption: and styl beseeching the Almightye to blesse you in earth with much honour, and in heauen to crowne you with eternall felicitie.

 Your Honors humble and faythfull

Seruant. Tho: Houell.

¶ The Table of the Contents of this Booke.

- NO assurance, but in Vertue.
¶ Prosperity ought not cause presumption, nor aduersity force dispayre.
¶ Once warnde, twice armde.
¶ Flattery the Vayle of Frawde.
¶ No greater contrariety, then in the pafsions of Loue.
¶ In vttering of sorrow, some solace.
¶ Miserie the ende of Letchery.
¶ The paines of Louers great, but mine gricuous.
¶ Ruine the rewarde of Vice.
¶ The best Natures soonest abused.
¶ He lykeneth his lotte to Virgils.
¶ All of greene Willow, Willow, Willow, Willow,
Sith all of greene Willow shall be my Garland.
¶ All of greene Lawrel.
¶ No new fancies shall alter olde lyking.
¶ A Dreame.
¶ The lamentable ende of Iulia Pompeis Wyfe.
¶ Secrecy, for some sorrows, a needefull remedy.
The ende of lyfe, the begynning of blisse.
They soonest yelde remedy, that haue felt lyke extremitie.
A Posie.
Vnthankfulnesse of minde, a monster in Nature.
Noble minds eyther conquer or couer.
Vngie seruerey.
Doe or be still.
He denies quickly, that giues slowly.
Women are words, men are deeds.
Enuy euer depraueth desert.
A Winters morning muse.
Mans lyfe lykened to a stage play.
To his Miltresse.
Reward doth not alwayes aunfwere deserte.
Who hurt, must heale.
Of Loue.
Of Bayes and Willow.

The Table.

- ¶ An Epitaph vpon the death of the Ladye Katherine, late Countesse of Pembrooke.
Vltimum vale.
- ¶ In aduersitie is best seene Vertues excellency.
- ¶ Sorrowe disclosed, somewhat eased.
- ¶ Omnis fortuna superanda ferendo est. Of sufferance comes ease.
- ¶ H. his Reply to his friend. A. M.
- ¶ H. to himselfe.
- ¶ Written to a most excellent Booke, full of rare inuention.
- ¶ The complainte of a sorrowfull wight, founde languishing in a Forrest.
- ¶ Of Fancie.
- ¶ Aunswere.
- ¶ Euer fought, neuer founde.
- ¶ A Poefie.
- ¶ Aunswere.
- ¶ Euery thing is as it is taken.
To his Lady of her doubtfull aunswere.
Helpe best welcome, when most needefull.
Of the Golden worlde.
Of Golde.
A. W.
Aunswere. H.
Of Friends.
Answere. E. L.
Reply to the same.
Another waye.
To his Friend M. S.
In mediocritie most safety.
To the same.
That valiant hartes are defyrous to aspyre.
- ¶ Aunswere.
- Another waye.
To his Friend E. R. of the Bee.
Sure counsell, founde friendship.
They performe not best, that promise most.

Bewtie

The Table.

Bewtie the bayte Vanitie.

Of Fortune.

A Sonet.

To her Louer, that made a conquest of her, & fled, leauing her with childe.

Be yng burdened to fayne his good will, he aunfwereth thus.

Change of Country, shall not change fancie.

Where abilitie fayleth, wyll sufficeth.

Mans impietie, fayns false Deitie.

In loue smale iarres, sometime breede best content.

What Nature feuereth, Arte hardly ioyneth.

He wysleth well to the Crabbe and Maple Tree in Milfeelde, for the Ladies sake that met there vnder them.

Being charged with fineneffe he aunfwereth thus.

Such Saintes, such seruice.

I follow what flyeth from me.

No grieue to wante of due regarde

Of Anger.

A New yeares gifte.

Another.

Another.

Another.

An Epitaph.

A Dreame.

Loue asketh loue.

The variable thoughts of a Louer.

R. T.

Aunfwere.

Another waye.

Godlyneffe passeth ryches.

His aunfwere to one that wrote, faynte hartes that feare to synne, fayre Ladyes syldome wyne.

To I. N.

H. To his mishap.

Falsyfying of fayth, breeds many complaints.

To his Song, sent to his Miltresse.

The Table.

A Poefie.

Aunfwere.

The vanitie of rytches.

Discord makes weak, what concord left strong.

Of one that came to borrowe money.

Aunfwere.

Truth feareth no tryall.

He complayneth his mishap, with promise to keepe her honor.

G. To his Ladye.

For smale offence, smale punishment.

¶ Loues myghtinesse growes by Louers weaknesse.

¶ A comparifon of his troubles.

¶ I. K. to H. being sicke.

¶ Aunfwere H.

¶ Of Friendship.

¶ Aunfwere. G. H.

¶ H. To M.

¶ Admonition to his Friend.

¶ Who seekes this Worlds felicitie,

Fyndes nothing else but vanitie.

To a Flatterer.

Aunfwere.

Reason and Fantasie doe often varie.

A Poefie.

Certaine Verses translated out of Petrark concerning Rome, written by hym many yeares since.

FINIS.

¶ To the Reader.

WHere none but Nature is the guyde, MINERVA hath no parte,
 Then you her Nurcelings beare with him, y^t knows no aide of arte.
 I wake my wits to please my selfe, nought reaking praise or blame,
 I force my pen to purge my brayne, though matter finall I frame.
 In which attempt, if lack of skill, haue led my Muse awry,
 Let my well meaning minde the misse, in eche respect supply.
 If patterns wrought by Arte, of curious workman here thou seeke,
 Thy traually then thou shalt but lose, to looke and neuer leeke.
 But if good-will may thee suffice, peruse, and take thy pleasure,
 In Natures schoole my little skill: I learned all by leasure.
 Here nothing placed is, that may the vertuous sorte offende,
 Though eniuous Carpers barke and snarle, at things they scarce can mende.
 Whose chiefeft grace is wise to seeme, by blotting others deedes,
 Whose paynted flowers in prooffe full oft, fall out but stinking weedes.
 The chaste desyre with honest ryme, mislykes no whitt in minde,
 But venomde Spyderys poyson take, where Bee doth honey finde.
 With greater ease a fault is founde, then well to welde the reste:
 It differs much to tell the tale, and words misplaste to wreste.
 By patterns here displayed to thee, thou mayst perhaps preuente
 The poysoning bayts of bitter sweete, whose blisse brings sharp euente.
 Disloyall loue and filthie lust, thou here art taught to flee:
 With other Sawes to sundry endes, though hewed rough they bee.
 That lyfe is lyke a Bubble blowne, or smoke that soone doth passe,
 That all our pleasures are but paynes, our glorie brittle glasse.
 That Fortunes fruites are variable, no holde in Princely mace:
 That womens myndes are mutable, that death drawes on apace.
 That worldly pompe is vanity, that youth vnwares decays:
 That high estate is slipperie, that onely vertue staves,
 Here learne thou mayst: with diuers notes, gaynst fraude and flattery,
 That may suffice to warne the wise, to voyde such battery.
 And eke thou here mayst viewe and see, howe Bewtie cruell haste:
 Doth make, to shun the gallant face, where she but late was plaste.
 That she is Natures priueledge, and so is sayd to bee
 Because she seldom giues that gyfte, but where she cause doth see.

That

To the Reader.

That beawtie is a dumbe disceite, not hauing worde or arte :
And yet with silente crafte she can, perfwade the hardest harte.
She conquers where she coms by kinde : for Creatures faire procure,
By naked lookes, such yeelding harts, as they wishe to allure.
Whose vayne delights if thou desier, thy thryfte goes to the grounde,
(And yet by honest loue we see, the greatest wealth is founde.)
APOLLOS troope my faults will passe, and waye my want herein,
Whose freindly fauor if I gaine, I prise not PAN a pin.
The trauell myne, the pleasure thine, if ought thou here doe leeke,
Thy good reporte, for paynes ymployed is sole rewarde I seeke.

Virtus honorem parit.

¶ Faults escaped in the printing. (†)

In the Sonet entiteled Ruine the reward of Vice, the seconde line, for ioy, reade ioyes. And in the fyft staffe of the same Sonet, the last line, for forling, reade falsing.

In the answer to the poesie written of Fansie, the laste lynce, for you reade your.

In the Golden world, the xvij. vearse and fyrst word, for Gor, read For.
In the Sonet entiteled hir louer that made a conquest of hir, the viii. staffe, the last line, for shamefull, read shamelesse.

In mans impietie, faines false deitie, the first verse, for faine, read faynde.

In Sorrowe disclosed somewhat eased, for setled sorrows, read sorrowe.

In such saints, such seruice, toward the ende of the Sonet, for when, read whence.

In what Nature seuereth, arte hardly ioymeth, the laste line of the first staffe, for soone, read fame.

In the vanity of riches, after the sixt line read, For who hath most of such a store, the more he feares as thrall. Which is there lacking.

In Discorde makes weak, what, &c. the last lynce faue one, for guyde, reade guyle.

In Reason and fancie do often vary, the first word, for there, read where.

(†) [These faults are corrected in this reprint, Oxford, 1906.]

Delightfull Discourses

to fundry purposes.

¶ No assurance but in Vertue.

Who wifely skans, the weake and brittle stayes,
That Natures Imps, within thys vale possesse,
The dyuers haps, the sfrage vncertayne wayes,
That headlong forth we runne beyonde all gesse,
Shall foone perceyue, that euery worldly ioye,
Short pleafures yeelds, imixte with long anoye.

Though whorde of heaped store, for more delight,
Our Cofers keepe, to please our greedie luste :
Yea, though our time we passe in ioyfull plight,
And in thys lyfe repose our chiefest trust,
Yet worldly pompe, when all is fayde and done,
Doth vade away, lyke Snowe against the Sonne.

A tyme of byrth Dame Nature doth vs giue,
A tyme to dye shee lykewife doth prouyde :
No fooner doe we fyrst beginne to liue,
But straight to death vnwares away we flyde,
And yet alas, our fancies are so frayle,
That all our ioye is here to hoyse vp Sayle.

But such as set their Heauen of lingering lyfe,
In pleasures lap, whose froward tickle wheele
(Sayth wifdoms sonne) with frowning turne is ryfe,
To drowne their blisse, that blyndly so doe reele,
By searche shall fynde, eche fleeting pleasure vaine,
When Vertues Impes, with Vertue highe shall raigene.

Then who so sees, the Sugar strawde on Gall,
And shunnes the same, by sacred Vertues skill :

B.j.

Shall

Delightfull Discourses

Shall safely stande, when Follyes children fall,
That heedlesse holde, Dame pleasures wanton will,
Thus Vertue stayeth, when Vices steps doe flyde,
So are they blest, that doe in Vertue byde.

¶ Prosperitie ought not cause presumption, nor aduersitie force dispayre.

WHere Fortune fauoreth not, what labor may preuaile?
Whō frowning fate wil needs thrust down, what shal he win
With pacient mind to yeeld, is sure the soundest way, (to waile?)
And cast our cares and griefe on him, that fatall force doth sway.
For Death with equal pace, doth passe to Princes gate,
And there as at the Cottage poore, doth knock in one like state.
The tyme or maner how, the highst no more can tell,
Then poorest Pcyfant placed here, in base estate to dwell.
Sith then such feeble stay, in mortall might we finde,
Why should the wante of worldly drosse, in dole once daunt our minde.
The Tylman pore in toyle, that spends the weary day,
Whose welth will scarce supply his wante, when some whoorde heaps Fals not to flat dispaire, ne yet his labor leaues, (y^e play.)
Though scarce y^e stubble prooues his share, when others shock the
But liues with mind content, more free frō care & strife, (sheaues
Then those y^t hunger highest hap, where dangers dwel most rife.
Though prowde ambition blinde, puft vp with glory vaine,
Deteft their state that riches wante, with hawty high disdaine.
The Seas oft troubled are, by winds that whyrling flye,
When shallow streams yeeld water cleere, in valleis low y^t lye.
High Mountaynes set on fyre, by lightning eke we see,
When Pastures placed vnderneath, in nothing altered bee.
The formost fronte in fight, are neereft deadly wounde,
The lofty tree is soonst blowne down, & leueld with the grounde.
So such as thirst to clymbe, to daunger most are thrall,
Whose flyding glory sawced is, with honey mixt with Gall.
For who so gript with griefe, if Fortune liſte to lowre,
As those that earst did feede at full, vpon her fayrest flowre?

Which

to sundry purposes.

Which change full oft hath false, through her vnconstantnesse,
And whome she lately laught vpon, throwne downe remedilesse.
Was ALEXANDER great, that many daungers past,
For all his mightie conquest wonne, not slayne himselfe at last?
A kings sonne eke I finde, for Fathers tyranny,
Constraynde to worke a Smith in Forge, by harde necessity.
Such is the fading force, of Fortunes fickle powre, Whose fruitfull fruite both rypes and rottes, in lesse space then an Such is her tickle trust, such are her slipper steps, (howre.
That what she feesme to sowe in ioy, with sorrow oft she reaps.
Attribute all to him, that fate doth guyde therefore,
With wylling mind embrace thy lot, where rich thou be or pore.

¶ Once warnde, twice armde.

WHylste slye deceyte, by sleight of smyling cheare,
Yeeldes tickling hope, to dandle on our dayes:
We dread no guyle, no doubling drift we feare,
Our founde beliefe such setled trust doth rayse.
But when in fyne, we finde our felues misled,
We blame the frawde that fo our fancies fed.

And gripte with grieffe, our former trust we wayle,
Exclayming lowde that falshood so can fayne,
When glosing shewes clokt vnder friendshippes vayle,
Fals out but slyght, to foster hope in vayne.
Loe thus full oft, what deemde hath bene the funne.
Prooffe CYNTHIA findes, whose course more lowe doth runne.

As some haue tryde through time and trauell spente,
Who traynde by trust, haue deemde good hap there platt,
Had swayed the foyle, where ruine all to rente,
Hath due defart, with rigour downe defast.
Whose shorte regarde, for long imployed toyle,
May warne the wife of frawde to feare the foyle.

Delightfull Discourses

¶ Flattery the Vayle of Frawde.

FAyre words foule deeds, pretended and forethought,
Who can but hate, that holds the feare of God :
Fayne you that lyst, fuch practise prouoes but nought,
Vyle diuclishe driftes, prouoke Ioues wrathfull rod,
Which sure will fall, if we in synne perseuer,
Shame is the fruite, of frawde and foule endeuor.

Wherein beholde, some maske in Nettles at Noone,
Yet deeme they walke in clowdes of close disguise :
Hoyste vp in thought, to reache beyonde the Moone,
When all the worlde, their couert cunning spyes.

But these to name, my pen and speeche shall spare,
Who medleth least, least cumbred is with care.

It me suffizen may to note their driftes,
That weene by wyles, the worlde to weald at will :
Their glosing shewes, their slye and guylefull shiftes,
To trayne such on, as fynde not out their skylle.

Whose turnes to serue, though fooles a tyme be dandled,
The wyser wincke, that see how things are handled.

¶ No greater contrariety, then in the passions of Loue.

IN wyll to strong, in worke to weake is loue,
In hope to bolde, in feare more faynte then needs :
In thought a thousand guyles it stryues to proue,
In guyle, suspition painefull passions breedes.
Suspition easely yeelds to light beleefe,
And light beleefe to iecalouie is thrall,
The iecalous mynde deuoures it selfe with grieffe,
Thus loue at once doth frye, freefe, ryfe and fall.
On pleasures paste to thinke, it takes delighe,
Whyles present blisse, by fonde conceyte it balkes,

Although

to sundry purposes.

Although the fruite it fynde, be penfue plight,
For better chaunce, yet carelesse on it walkes,
These are the feedes that VENVS Baby fowes,
As taste they shall, the bitter crop that mowes.

¶ In uttering of sorrowe, some solace.

MY carefull case, and penfue pynning plight,
Constraynth my Pen, against my will to wright :
The plunged state, wherein I lyue and dwell,
Doth force me forth, my dolefull tale to tell.

My heaped woes, all solace sets asyde,
Whose secreet smarte (alas) I faine would hyde,
But as the subiect Oxe, to yoke must yeelde,
So vanquisht wightes, are forste forfak the feeelde.

My lucklesse lotte, denies me all releife,
I seeke for helpe, but finde increase of grieffe.
I languishe still, in long and deepe dispaire,
Yet shunne to shewe the cause of this my care.

I couet nought, that reason might denye,
Ne doe I seeke by meanes to moute on hye :
But what I seeke, if I the fame might finde,
Then easde should be, mine vncontented mynde.

¶ Miserie the ende of Letchery.

O Fylthy Letchery,	Whose smoke is infamy,
Fyre of foule fraylty,	Whose sparkes are vanity,
Nurffe to ympietie,	Whose flame obscurity,
Warre, pryde and ielousie,	Whose coles impurity,
Whose substance is gluttony,	And ashes mysery.

Delightfull Discourses

¶ The paines of Louers great, but mine grievous.

THe Frost in flame that Louers finde,
And swelting heat in chilly colde,
So quite contrary are by kinde,
As strange it seemeth to beholde,
Strange is the feare that makes them fainte,
And strange the care that chokes their ioy,
Yet stranger passions me attaynte,
The onely Nurffe of mine annoy.

¶ Ruine the rewarde of Vice.

TO you fayre Dames whose bewties braue do flourish,
To you whose daintie dayes in ioyes are spent :
To you whose prayfe Dame Nature seekes to poolish,
To you whose fancie VENUS doth frequent.
To you I wryte with harte and good intent,
That you may note by viewe of what I say,
How Natures giftes soone vade and flyde away.

Your loftie lookes, time downe full lowe shall raze,
Your stately steps age eke will alter quite :
Your fraile desyre that kindleth CYPIDS blafe,
Whose heate is prone to follow foule delight,
The whip shalbe, that shall you sharply smite :
When euery vice that sproong of Fancies fittes,
Repentance brings, to those the same committes.

Is not the pride of HELENS prayfe bereft ?
And CRESSIDE staynde, that Troian Knight imbrafed :
Whose bewties bright but darke defame hath left,
Vnto them both through wanton deedes preferred.
As they by dynte of Death their dayes haue ended,
So shall your youth, your pompe, and bewties grace,
When nothing else but vertue may take place.

Then

to sundry purposes.

Then shake of Vice ye Nymphes of CRESSIDS Crue,
And Vertue seeke, whose praife shall neuer die :
With fylthie lust your bodies not imbrue,
As did this LION Dame most wickedly,
Whose blisse by bale was plagude so greecuoufly,
That loe her lyfe in Lazars lodge she ended,
Who erst in Courte most curiously was tended.

Her Corps that did King PRIAMS sonne delight,
Consumde with cares, sent forth sad sighes full colde :
Her azurde vaynes, her face and skinne so white,
With purple spottes, seemde vgly to beholde.
Eche lymme alas corruption gan vnfolde,
In which distresse, and bitter straine of ruth,
She begges her bread, for falsing fayth and truth.

No forrow then might salue her lewde offence,
Nor raze the blotte that bred her black defame :
Her dolefull daies alas founde no defence :
Twas now to late to shunne the sheete of shame,
Which had bewrapt her wrackfull blemisht name,
So brode was blowne her crime and cursed case,
That worlds bewrayed her frowning fates disgrafe.

Loe here the ende of foule defyled lyfe,
Loe here the fruite that sinne both sowes and reapes :
Loe here of Vice the right reward and knyfe,
That cuttes of cleane and tumbleth downe in heapes,
All such as tread Dame CRESSIDS cursed steppes,
Take heede therefore how you your pryme do spende,
For Vice brings plagues, and Vertue happy ende.

Delightfull Discourses

¶ The best Natures, sooneſt abuſed.

BEtwixte my hope and dreade, grewe ſuch debate,
When fyrſt I fought theſe naked lynes to frame,
That long I pawfde, as doubtfull to dilate,
Whether beſt proceede, or elſe leaue of the ſame.
Tyll hope at laſt, diſpayre doth baniſhe quight,
And wylles my Pen aſſay in verſe to wright.

Fear not (quoth hope) to ſhewe thy wylling will,
(Smale feedes ſometyme may light on gratefull grounde :)
If none had wrote but Clarks of TVLLIES ſkill,
Sweete fawes had funck, which now aſſote are founde,
Then caſt of dread, diſpayre no whyt at all,
Diſcaſes great are cuerd with Medicins ſmall.

Theſe cheerefull wordes, no ſooner gan reuiue
My Muse, but ſtraight in mynde I me bethought,
How GNAROS ſecte through flattery doe contriue,
Eche guilefull gloſe, tyll they their wyles haue wrought,
Whoſe great abuſe, though briefly here I touch,
I ſpare to ſpeake, what might be fayde of ſuch.

Of friendſhip founde, though ſundry yeelde a ſhowe,
Yet fewe there be, in whome is tryed truſt :
Such fraude in friendly lookes doth dayly growe,
That who moſt fawnes, ofte proues the moſt vniuſt :
Who ſooner ſhall well meaning mindes betray,
Then ſuch as beſt can SINONS pagent play.

As Sayers carſt, by SIRENS ſongs alurde,
Deuoured were that lackt VLISSSES ſkill,
So Noble minds by ſuch haue bene procurde,
To credite toyes, that turnde to greater ill.
The Serpent wife, to ſtop hir cares deemes meete,
When Charmer ſeemes to charme with voyce moſt ſweete.

For

to sundry purposes.

For lyke as shadowe plasfe before the eyes,
Is not the thing that it doth represent :
Nor al prooues Gold that shines when touchstone tries,
Though fayre it feeme vnto some foule intent :
 No more doe words that passe from flattering sorte,
 Yeelde such effect as they doe oft report.

Some friendship faine to giue the greater gleeke,
Displeafures doubt another fort constraines :
To soothe vp things, which they perhaps mislike,
By meanes whereof vnseene, great mischief e raignes.
 Some fawne to serue their turne, where fortune smiles,
 But if she frowne, they flee with all their wiles.

¶Such shewes right well, comparde may be to shade,
That feelde is seene, but where the Sunne doth shine :
For as those shapes with euery clowde doe vade,
So Flatterers faile if Fortune once decline.
 Vse Serpents skill against this subtill kinde,
 Floodes drowne no Fields, before some brack they finde.

As fyre doth fine, and seperate Golde from droffe,
And shews the pure and perfite from the vyle :
So tryed is when wrackfull stormes doe tosse,
The faythfull friend from such as meane but guyle.
 For like as Doues delight in buyldings newe,
 To CRESSVS Court, so flocks COREBVS crewe.

Let wisedome therefore weld your wayes and deedes,
Whose prudent poise brings darkeſt doubts to light :
To quick mistrust in trustiest, treason breedes,
The hastie credite oft deemes wrong for right.
 Accounte of those, whome Vertues raigne doth guyde,
 For such will stande, when glosing GNATOS flyde.

C.j.

¶He

Delightfull Discourses

¶ He lykeneth his lotte to Virgils.

THough VIRGILS Vearfe, for loftie style were rare, Surmounting farre my feeble Muses might :
Yet in this poynte my case I may compare
With his, what tyme another claymde his right,
And say with him, though I the seede did sowe,
Another seekes the fruite therof to mowe.

Like as the toyling Oxe the Plow doth pull,
And hath but stalkes, when others share the cares :
Or as the sheepe that Nature clothes with wooll,
Brings forth the Fleece, the shearer from him sheares,
Euen much alike it fareth now with me,
That forst the ground, where others reape the Fee.

I bred the Bees, thou wouldst the Honey haue,
I tylde the foyle, thou seekest by guyle the gaine :
I owe the Tree, thou doest the branches craue,
Thou prickst for prayse, where none but I tooke paine.
What deedes denie, some wyne by naked wordes,
I hatchte the broode, though thou possesse the byrdes.

Who so doth holde the light, whilst others Maske,
No Masker is perdie, you know right well :
Nor all whose shewes would clayme the greatest taske,
Deferues the fame, when truth her tale doth tell.
Though mine the wrong, yet seemes the losse so light,
As shame forbids me more therof to write.

¶ All

to sundry purposes.

¶ *All of greene Willow, Willow, Willow, Willow,
Sitke all of greene Willow shall be my Garland.*

IMbrace your Bayes sweetely, that smile in loue[s fight,]
And deck you with Lawrell, that dwell in delight :
To me most vnhappy, still spurnde by dispight,
Is giuen writhed Willows to expresse my state right.

Pursuing the PANTHER whose sweete doth abound,
A most cruell Viper my hard fate hath found :
Whose nature to Spyders I well may compare,
That mercyleffe murders, whats caught in her snare.

The Lyon doth tender the beast that doth yelde,
The Tyger seemes constant, once conquerd in fieldes :
BELLONA shewes fauour to Captiuies that sue,
But VENVS refuseth my dolors to rue.

How shall I to ease me vnburden my brest,
Of these pensiue passions that breeds my vnrest :
When speech wanteth powre, when voyce is vnprest,
And wyt wanteth cunning to compasse loues best.

Yet what auayles words, where cares words doe flee,
Though words to the minde, true messengers bee ?
Or what vayleth wyt, where wyll is vntowarde ?
The sacrifice lost, where Saints be so frowarde.

¶ All of greene Lawrell.

TO sing of sorrowe still,
Attending VENVS will,
Were now but lack of skill,
Pittie lyes deade :

C.ij.

Then

Delightfull Discourses

Then cast of mourning cheare,
Let ioyfull plight appeare,
Where cloudes doe neuer cleare,
 Comfort is fledde.

Looke vp to the Lawrell, and let Willow goe,
And trust to the true friend, imbrace not thy foe,
 Sing all of greene Lawrell:
By trauaile who stryeth, to winne thanklesse wight,
Is lyke one that washeth a black a Moore white,
 Let all of greene Lawrell bedeck thy Garland.

Though some distill their teares,
That wrythed Willow weares,
Yet fainte not at their feares,
 Seeme not to dread:

The wisest haue done so,
The Valiant wrapt in wo,
Haue taken ouerthrow,
 By Fancie led.

Where wyt is confrayned by will to giue place,
Their songs are of forrow, that ioyes would embrace,
 Sing all of greene Lawrell.

Let no deceytfull shewes of VENVS bright shine,
Haue power once to pierce the sounde harte of thine,
 So shall the greene Lawrell set forth thy garland.

Waygh not the wauering minde,
That flectes with euey winde,
Tyll thou some stay doe finde,
 Trust not to farre.

Vnto Dame Constancy,
Bende still thy battery,
Flye fast from flattery,
 With bewtie make warre.

So shall thy well lyking not harme thee at all,
For fayth fixed firmly, such fauour will fall,
 That all of greene Lawrell, &c.

When

to sundry purposes.

When others in dolor their wrack shall bewayle,
Thy shyp on the sounde seas in safetic may sayle,
Where crownde with greene Lawrel, in ioy thou shalt sing.

¶ No newe fancies, shall alter olde lyking.

THough PARIS prayse, APOLLOS Impe gan stayne,
When change of choyce his fickle humor fedde,
And CARTHAGE cryes, with frayned voyce complainne,
On periurde Prince, by night that faithlesse fledde.
Though IASONS heste MEDEA founde vntrue,
And others mo there be whose fancye past :
That skorne the olde still haunting after newe,
Wythin whose hartes no leeking long may last,
Yet tyll syr PHEBUS beames shall lose their light,
And Ocean Seas doe ceafe to ebbe and flowe :
Vntill the day shall turne to perfite night,
And Natures course against her kinde shall goe.
My fixed fayth vnspotted shall remayne,
What would you more, I vowe I doe not fayne.

¶ A Dreame.

WHEN PHEBUS bright was setled in the West,
And darknesse dimme, the earth had ouerspread :
When fylent night, that moues eche thing to rest,
With quyet pawse, had plasste me in my bed,
In slombring Dreame, me thought I heard a wyght,
His woes bewayle, that grewe through loues despyght.

Whose wearing weede and vestures all were greene,
Saue that his loynes with black were girded rounde :
And on his brest a badge of blewe was seene,
In signe his fayth and truth remayned founde.
He sighed oft and said, O blissful hier,
When hope with hap, may ioye in his desier.

C.iiij.

But

Delightfull Discourses

But still to hope, and finde therein no fruite,
To be in bed, and restlesse there remaine :
To seeke to serue, and daylie make pursute,
To such as set but light of weary payne,
Doth breede such balefull dole within the brest,
As quyte bereaues all ioye and quyet rest.

Though taste of sower, deferue the sweete to gayne,
Yet cruell Fate I see the same denyes :
So that defyre and wifdome prooues but vayne,
Without accorde and fauour of the Skyes.
But stedfast hope, seeme not (quoth he) to quayle,
The heauens in tyme, may turne to thine auayle,
Scarfe had he thus his wofull speeche concluded,
When wake I did, and sawe my selfe deluded.

¶ The lamentable ende of Iulia Pompeis Wyfe.

SOre plunge in greuous paynes and wofull imarte,
Bedewed with trickling teares on Death like face :
Downe trylles the drops on cheekes & sighs from hart,
To heare and see her husbands dolefull case.
Thus goes thys spoufe, the wofull IVLIA,
Besprent with bloud, when POMPEIS Cote she saw.

Downe dead she falles in lamentable founde,
Of sence bereft (so great was sorrowes strayne)
The chylde conceyde within by deadly wounde,
Vntymely fruite came forth with pinching payne.
When all was done, for loue her lyfe she lost,
For POMPEIS sake, shee yeelded vp her Ghost.

So dead she laye, bewaylde with many teares,
A Matrone wife, a famous Ornament :

to sundry purposes.

O CÆSAR ſhē had ſeene full cheerefull yeares,
If thou with POMPEY couldſt haue bene content,
But ciuill warres hath wrought this fatall ſtryfe,
To POMPEY death, to IVLIA loſſe of lyfe.

¶ Secrecy, for ſome ſorrowes, a needefull remedy.

Like as the captiue Wight, in chayned lincks doth lye,
And hopes at Siſe to be releaſt, is thē condemde to dye.
Euen ſo alas my lot, by frowning fate doth fall,
That fought to feede on ſweete delight, but found moſt bitter
My reſtleſſe labor loſt, I iuſtly may compare, (Gall.
To SISIPHVS that neuer ſleepes, and grieſe to TITIVS care.
For after ſundry ſtormes, when calme I thinke to finde,
More rougher rage a new doth riſe, to ſtraine my daunted minde.
And when my quelling cares, I ſeeke by meanes to cure,
Moſt deepeſt dynte of inwarde woe, alas I doe endure.
PROMETHEVS pincht with payne, nor IXION whyrlede on wheele,
More grypes by grieſe doe not ſuſtaine, then I vnhappy feele.
The ſomme of my vnreſt, yet couert will I keepe,
And ſecretly my ſorrowes ſup, when others ſounde doe ſleepe.
To eaſe my penſyue breſt, a Vearſe though here I frame,
The burſting forth of ſorrowes mine, ſhal breed no further blame.
My ſydes ſhall ſhryne this ſmart, my hart ſhall waſt with woe,
Ere I the ſecrete of my cauſe, bewray to friend or foe.
Sauē onely to the Saint, that ſwayes my lyfe at wyll,
Whoſe pittie may prolong the fame, or crueltie may kyll.

¶ The ende of lyfe, the beginning of blyſſe.

WHy ſhoulde we feare to dye ?
Or ſeeke from Death to flye,
When Death the way doth make,
Eche worldly woe to ſlake,
By whome we paſſe to ioye,
Where neuer comes annoyē.

Our

Delightfull Discourses

Our tryflyng triumphs heere,
Though we esteeme them deere,
Are like to vapours vayne,
That waste with little rayne,
Deluding Dreames in deede,
Whereon our fancies feede.

What yeelde our pleasures all,
But sweeteneffe mixt with Gall,
Their pryme of chiefeft pride,
Vnwares away doth slide,
Whose shewe of sweete delight,
Oft dymmes our perfyte fight.

Though Love in loftie seate,
Haue placed Princes great,
With Regall rule to raigne,
His glory to explaine,
Yet vades their pompe and powre,
As doth the wythred Flowre.

Loe here the surest staye,
The worlde doth yeelde vs aye,
Thy dearest friend to daye,
To morrow falles away,
Whose wante thou doest bewaile,
When teares may nought preuaile.

Sithe lyfe is myseric,
Voyde of felicitie,
Full of anxietie,
Giuen to impietie,
The death I happy call,
That doth bereauc such thrall.

to sundry purposes.

¶ They sooneſt yeelde remedy, that haue felt lyke extremetie.

THe flames of fyre and cloudes of cold, repugnant in my brest,
Hath quite exiled me from ioy, and rest all quiet rest.
Yet oft (alas) in shewe I smile, to shade my inwarde smarte,
When in my laughter waues of woe, well nie do burſt my harte.
Whose driery thoughts I would to God, were seene so ful to thee,
As mine afflicted minde in payne, doth powre them out on mee.
So should perhaps thy frozen hart, now harde as Flintie stone,
Within thy brest wth melting teares, take ruth on this my mone.
But as he well cannot discerne, what tempest Saylers trye,
That neuer crost the checking tydes, y^t furge with waues on hye.
No more canst thou my cares descry, for wante of ryper skill,
Although in deede the shewes thereof, doe pleade for pittie still.
In vayne therefore my pensiue plaintes, by Pen I doe expresse,
When both thy will and want of skill, denies to yeelde redresse.
The cruell fates (I feare) forbids, that I such blisse should finde,
Or sacred Love some other hap, hath to my share assignde.

¶ A Poesie.

Sithe follye tis to wishe, what may not be enjoyed,
And wisdom to eschew the harmes, wherwith we are anoyed.
Let reason guyde thy thoughts, when fancie most doth fight,
And count him victor of the Field, that conquers bewties might.

¶ Vntbankfulnesse of minde, a monster in Nature,

ON thanklesse Friend, whose trauayle is imployde,
With Asses Damme shall reape ingratefull meede:
Whose wanton Fole by her sweete mylke acloyde,
Oft kicks the Nurse, that doth it choycely feede.

D.j.

As

Delightfull Discourses

As doe the Vipers broode, whose yongling long,
When mothers care with tender loue hath cherisht :
Requite the same with such vngratefull wrong,
That in rewarde, her lyfe by them is perisht.
Whose Nature is vnkindly to deuoure,
The wombe whence fyrst they tooke their luyng powre.
To whom we may the vngratefull forte compare,
That Viper lyke feeke spoyle, where they should spare.

¶ Noble minds eyther conquer, or couer.

AS SCIPIO smylde to cloke his couert smarte,
What tyme he sawe his happy state declyne :
So some alike doe shadowe grieffe of harte,
With outwarde myrth, when inwardly they pyne.
And to the worlde yeelde forth such shewes of ioye,
As fewe would deeme, they once did tast annoy.
When they in deede, with SCIPIOS grieffe complayne,
Their short regarde, for long employed payne.

¶ Vng ie seruirey.

TO serue but one, a constant courage shoues,
Who serueth more, he rightly serueth none :
Bafe is the minde that bends to many Bowes,
Next God, a Prince we ought obey but one.
One God, one Prince, he serues, defends and feares,
Vng ie seruirey, for his worde that beares.

¶ Doe, or be still.

THe shallow streames, doe murmour more then deepe,
And Cowards bragge, that dares no weapons prouue :
Those Dogs byte least, that greatest barkings keepe,
Some do but fayne, whose shewes seeme farre in loue.
Sounde is the Tree, whence friendships fruite doth spring,
Doe or be still, let none but SYRENS sing.

¶ He

to sundry purposes.

¶ He denies quickly, that giues slowly.

L Ingring delayes, slacke payments doe foreshowe,
Better no promise, then no performance:
Sleight are the sorrowes, slakte with comforts slowe,
Eyther sende, or ende, yeelde some assurance.
Shyfting delaye, mislyking oft doth breede,
They soone denye, whose Suters slowly speede.

¶ Women are wordes, Men are deedes.

IF nought but wordes in women to be founde,
Then what are they, men, women, or Monsters,
That yeelde lyke fruite? or else a hollowe founde,
Which substance none, but ayre forth vtters.
By deedes and not by words, men praise obtayne,
Monsters, no men, whose deedes their words doe stayne.

¶ Enuye euer depraueth deserte.

THou snarling Curre, that crept in Maunger lyes,
And lets the Courser there to reache his right:
Thy malice great, and swelling false surmise,
Thou out shouldst barke, before thou secrete bite.
But fythe thy cankered nature (needes I see,)
Must byte or burst, I open warre denounce,
Against thy kinde, what euer so thou bee,
Which seeks by guile our buyldings downe to bownce.
With SYRENS voyce thy tune thou seekst to fayne,
As though in deede our braynes so barren were:
We could not compasse tryflyng toyes most playne.
Vnlesse our light we sought some other where.
Thou barkst abrode of Bookes, from whence it came,
But can thy head (in fayth) no better gesse:

D.ij.

The

Delightfull Discourses

The toys themfelues doe bid thee ceafe for shame,
Left more thou fperne, more folly thou exprefse.
Well MOMVS mate, and fonne of ZOYLVS fecte,
That fo canft carpe at euery wylling minde :
Raze nothing downe, till fomething thou erecte,
Spare others fpoyle, fythe nought in thee we finde.
Let them enioye the fruites of their defyre,
That seekes good will, and craues no other hyre.

¶ A Winters Morning muse.

AS by occasion late, towards BRVTVS Citie olde,
With quiet pace alone I rode, in winter fharp & colde.
In my delating brains, a thoufand thoughts were fed,
And battailewife a warre they made, in my perplexed hed.
I thought on tymely change, and mufde on yerely wafte,
How winter aye deuours the welth, that pleafant fommer plaft.
I fawe the naked Fields vnclouthde on euery fide,
The beaten bufhes ftand al bare, that late were deckt with pride.
Whofe fainting fap was fled, and falne from top to roote,
Eche tree had newe caft of his Cote, and laid him at his footc.
The fmale and fyllie Byrds, fat houering in the hedge,
And water Fowles by Wynter forft, forlooke the Fenny fedge.
Thus Nature altering quite, her earthly childrens cheere,
Doth fhewe what brittle ftay of ftate, and feeble holde is heerc.
Who as in slender things, she fhewes her yerely might,
So doth she like attempt her force, in all degrees aright.
For as I mufing rode, I plainly might perceauē, (bereauē.
That like both change and chance there was, mans ftate that did
I fawe the mounting minde, that clymbde to reach the Skyes, Aduanced vp by Fortunes wheele, on tickle ftay that lyes,
Fall foone to flat decay, and headlong downe doth reele,
As fickle Fortune lift to whyrle, her rounde vnftable wheele.
Was neuer Prince of power, fo fafe in his degree,
But deemde sometime the meaner fort, to fyt more fure then hec.
Then

to sundry purposes.

Then to my selfe I sayde, if Fortune stande vnfire,
And highest type of worldly hap, vncertaine doe endure.
Why thirst we so to raigne? why hunger we for heape?
Why presse we forth for worldly pompe, wth brech of quiet sleape?
Which lyke a Mothe eats out, the gaine of godly lyfe,
With all that stretch their vaine desyre, to wrest thys worlde in stryfe.
Whose fruite of toying paine, by sweate and forrow fought,
Is lost in twinckling of an eye, our name consumde to nought.
Yea though by worldly wyles, we thousande driftes deuife,
A God there is that lauges to scorne, the wisedome of the wise.
When thus along my waye, I diuerly had musde,
I found whome Fortune high did heaue, on sodaine she refuse.
Then he by Vertue stayde, me thought the rest did passe,
So farre as doth the purest Golde, the vile and basest brasse.
Euen he I deemed blest, that wearing Vertues Crowne,
Doth liue contēt, not caring ought, how Fortune smile or frowne.

¶ Mans lyfe likened to a Stage play.

Sithe earth is Stage whereon we play our partes,
And deedes are deemde according to defartes,
Be warie how thou walkst vpon the same,
In playing thy parte, thy course vprightly frame.

Remember when thy tale is tolde, straight way
Another steps on stage his part to playe,
To whome thou must refigne thy former state,
As one that hath already playde his mate.

All welth, pompe, powre, high hap and princely Mace,
Must yeelden be to such as shall take place,
As things but lente, to play our parts withall,
Our meede no more, then our defarts doe fall.

Not he that playeth the stateliest parte most praise,
Nor he that weares the ryches robe alwaies,

D.iiij.

But

Delightfull Discourses

But he whose Vertues shall exceede the reaft,
How so his seate be with the great or leaft.

Take heede therefore, and kepe eche Cve so right,
That Heauen for hyre vnto thy lotte may light.
With greedie minde so wrest not worldly gayne,
That foule doe spill, for flyingd pleasures vayne.

Sufficed be with that sufficient is,
And seeke the things that bring eternall blisse,
So shalt thou here not onely purchase prayse,
But after eke enjoy most happie dayes.

¶ To his Mistresse.

MAye name of seruauant, to familier seeme,
For such whose seruice neuer swarude away?
Can Noble mindes so base of those esteeme,
That freely yeelde for them to liue or dye?
No, no, some further fetche conceyued is,
Which hath withdrawne from me that wonted name:
How so it be, if I be more amisse,
Then founde good will hath once defarued blame.
The wreckfull Gods powre downe vpon my hed,
Such sharpe reuenge as neuer man did feele:
And let my Ghost in LYMO lowe be led,
TO TANTALS thyrst, or prowde IXIONS wheele.
What wouldst thou more? if I not wishe thee well,
IN PLVROS Den, then let me lyue and dwell.

¶ Rewarde

to sundry purposes.

¶ Rewarde doth not alwayes aunswere deserte.

Sith my desyre is prest to please,
Though not with glosing shoue :
And eke my deeds if prooffe were made,
Should tell what fayth I owe.
Whereto shall I impute my hap,
To Fate or wante of skill :
When nought I finde but tickle trust,
Where most I meane good will.

¶ Who hurte, must keale.

THe sparkes of loue within my brest, doe daylie so increase,
That euery vain on fyre is set, which none but thou mayst cease.
So that in thee consists my woe, in thee likewise my wealth,
In thee with speede to hast my death, in thee to giue me health,
O pittie then his restlesse state, that yeeldes him to thy will,
Sithe loe in thee it wholly lyes, my life to saue or spill.
That neyther doe I glose or faine, I loue to witnesse call,
Who knows the heat of fired harts, when they to loue are thrall.
And shall I thus a wofull Wight, in rigor still remayne ?
Shal such as smale good wil me beare, thy grace frō me restrayne (?)
Shall false perfwation so preuaile, to let our wished ioye ?
Shall fayth and troth for their rewarde, reape naught but sharpe an noy ?
Or else shal want of pyning welth, retract my iust desier.
Do not the Gods at pleasure theirs, the lowe estate raise higher ?
Is not the worlde and all therein, at their disposing still ?
Doth it not rest in them to giue, and take from whom they will.
No recklesse race then shalt thou runne, ne follow vaine delight,
In yeelding help to cure his harme, that holds thee dearest in sight.
Ne yet from tip of Fortunes wheele, thou shalt ne slide nor swarue,
Such hope I haue of better hap, the Fates do yet resarue.
Thy person, not thy pelfe, is all I wishe and craue,
Which more I vowe I do esteeme, then heaps of coyne to haue.

D.iiij.

The

Delightfull Discourses

The greatest Princes aye by prooffe, lead not the pleasantst lyfe,
Nor euery maide that maryeth welth, becoms the happiest wyfe.

¶ Of Loue.

ANd if Loue be Lorde, who or what is he?
If Loue be not, who then bereaues my rest?
If no such thing, alas what ayleth me?
What breedes such broyle, what woundes my yeelding brest?
To tell what tis, doth passe my knowledge farre,
But who so loues I see doth liue in warre.

¶ Of Bayes and Willow.

SHewc forth your Bayes that boaste of swecte delightes,
For I ne may such bliffull hap attayne:
The Willow branche most fit for wofull wightes,
Beholde I beare, a badge of secreet payne.
Which loe my sides enshryne, and shall doe still,
Till cruell Fate hath wrought on me her will.

¶ An Epitaph vpon the death of the Lady Katherine, late Countesse of Pembroke.

IF such doe mourne, whose solace is bereft,
And sighs seeme sharpe to those whom sorrowes sting:
If cares increase where comforte none is left,
And griefs do grow, where peniue thoughts do spring
Then be we sure, our Lorde in sadde annoy,
Doth wayle her death, whose lyfe was all his ioy.

If he (alas) with sobs her losse bemones,
May seruauents spare their sighes abroad to sende?

Shall

to sundry purposes.

Shall they in secret throwde their gryping grones,
When maysters playnts may haue no power to ende?

No, no, deepe dole our pensiue sides would pearce,
If we in teares our forrowes not rehearce.

Then mourne with me my wofull fellows all,
And tryll your teares your drooping cheekes adowne:
Gufhe forth a gulfe of griefes, let floodes downe fall,
To wayle her wante, that sprang of high renowne.

Who whyles she liude, did sundry seeke to ayde,
But Death, O Death, thou hast them all difinayde.

The cheerefull spring that doth eche soyle adourne,
With pleasant showes, whereby delight is taken:
Doth moue our mindes, alas the more to mourne,
Our Ladie lost in source of forrowes shaken.

Which loe in Ver to heauen hath tane the waye,
To her great gayne, but oh to our decaye.

If Princes loue, if husbands care or Coyne,
If Noble friends, if prooffe of Phificks lore:
By long attempt could sicknesse vndermoine,
Or search of forrein soyle might health restore.

We should not yet haue feene the sonne to vade,
Whose clipped light, hath turnde our shyne to shade.

But when the twyfte of this our tyme is wownde,
No meanes by man may ferue the fame to stretch:
Our lottes are layde, our bodyes haue their bownde,
Tyme swiftly runnes with short and curelesse breach.

Though world we weld in feate of Princely sway,
Yet swarues our state, as shade that flydes away.

The glittering shewes of highest glory heere,
Consumes to nought, like clouds disperst with winde:

E.j.

And

Delightfull Discourses

And all that Nature from the earth doth reare,
Returns againe, whence first it came by kinde :
But Vertues webbe, which loe this Lady sponne,
Shall last for aye, now these her dayes be done.

Her praise on earth lyke Palme shal florifhe still,
Her Noble deedes shall liue and neuer dye :
Her sacred steps that fought eche vice to kill,
Shall mounte aloft, though lowe in earth she lye.
Who euen when latter pangues opprest her most,
Did mercy craue in yeelding vp the Ghost.

What would you more, her lyfe and death was such,
As deeper head could not commend to much.

Ultimum vale.

*F*arewell thou Pearle that Princes fauour founde, Farewell the Saint that shielded our annoy :
Farewell the Hauen whose harbor was full sounde,
Farewell the Barke that brought her Chiefetaine ioy.

Farewell thou Spowse to him that held thee deare,
Farewell the Lampe that gaue such gladsome light :
Farewell of modest Dames a Mirrour cleare,
Farewell the sbyrne where vertue shyned bright.

Farewell thou minde that mente to no wight ill,
Farewell the harte that lodged honor aye :
Farewell the hande that helpt the needie still ;
Farewell the staffe that sought the weake to stay.

Loe here in teares my last farewell I take,
What Heauens will haue, the earth must needs forsake.

to sundry purposes.

¶ In aduersitie, is best seene Vertues excellency.

WHen Boreas rough, had leaueleffe left eche tree,
And horie HIEMS gan his raigne to holde :
In walking forth, I might discerne and see,
A stately Palme, her branches greene vnfolde.
At sight whereof, when I a tyme had mused,
By malice meanes, I sawe the tree abused.

I sawe howe swelling Enuye in the top,
Sat shrowded close, embrasing slaunders cup :
By whome stooode Hate, aye ready prest to crop,
Ech springing spray, so soone as they shot vp.
And Flattery eke, did fiske from place to place,
By SYNONS arte, to seeke the Palmes disgrace.

As Tennys Ball, yet make(s) the higheft bownde,
When greatest powre is plaite to presse the fame :
Or as a Bell sends forth the brimmeft sownde,
When deepest downe the Ringer plucks the frame.
Euen so in fort, this Tree did rise and spring,
That Enuye fought by burden low to bring.

Which to your vertues may alude right well,
Though Malice fainte, to matche you with her might :
Yet fewe so fure in these our dayes doe dwell,
That Enuye neuer spurnes with deepe disfight.
If such then be, or if hereafter shall,
The Gods graunt you, as to the Palme doth fall.

E.ij.

¶ Sorrowe

Delightfull Discourses

¶ Sorrowe disclosed, somewhat eased.

Sithe kindled coales close kept, continue longest quick, (prick.
And secret smarte with greater power, the pensiue mind doth
Why should I cloke the grieffe, from whence such passions grow, Vnlesse my braine by Pen I purge, my brest they ouerflow.
When night with quyet pause, eche creature calls to rest,
Through quelling cares & pinching thoughts, I lye so fore oprest,
That from my setling downe, vntill the tyme I rise,
Sleepe hardly wins the force to close, my watchful drooping eies.
The Skrich Owle me besides, her dolefull tunes doth shreeke,
Whose cryes my cares may represent, that rest in vaine do seeke.
To thinke on the mishaps, which daylie me betyde,
When surest hope of sweete redresse, I see away doth flyde.
The hardest harte by prooffe, doth yeelde an inwarde pante,
When good desyres are deprest, by wrack of IRVS wante.
Wante makes best natures fall, that else would vpright stand:
Want makes the valiant faynt in feares, though strong be harte Want drowns in dollor deepe, the pleafants(t) wits y^t bee, (& hand.
Want daunts the finste conceited head, and makes it dull we see.
Wante makes the olde wyfe trot, the yong to run outright,
Wante makes the noblest hart & mind, to seeme but base in fight.
Wante makes the Lyon stowte, a slender pray to leeke,
Want plucks the Pecocks plume adown, want makes y^o mighty meeke
Want is the sowrce whence sorrows spring, y^t hafts y^o lifes decay,
Want loads the hart with heaped cares, that crush al ioys away.
Neede hath no lawe some say, extremes, extremes doe vrge,
The passions that by want do pain, what phisick wel may purge?
Vnhappy is the hower, that such sharp sicknesse brings,
And thrise vnhappy is the wretch, whom want so deadly stings.
Aye me that such sowre sawce, false Fortune should procure,
When flylie forth she seemes to throw, her traine on golden lure.
By sleight whereof she doth, a piercing poyson place,
Ful closely coucht on pleasant bayte, to worke our more disgrafe.

As

to sundry purposes.

As I but lately tryed, who doe her guyle so taste,
That secretly I sup the smarte, that my good dayes defaste.
The time that I began to enter fyrst to lyfe,
Would God the sisters three had cut, the threed with fatall knyfe.
Would God that Death had bene, with bowe and arrows bente,
To pierce the woful hart of mine, which now with care is spent.
Whose hard and crooked fate, increasing euery hower,
Doth force me wake when others sleepe, where Fortune doth not lower.
And when the dawning daye, I doe perceyue and see,
And how fyr TYTAN vaunts himselfe, full braue in fyrst degree,
Whose gladfome golden beames, doe moue eche thing to ioye,
Sauē onely me, whose wrackfull woes, haue wrought my sadde annoy.
Then from my couch I creepe, al clad with cloke of care,
And forth to walke in defarte woodes, my selfe I doe prepare.
Where none but wofull wights, do wandring waile their griefe(,)
Where violence doth vengeance take, where neuer comes relief.
Where pleasure playes no parte, nor wanton lyfe is ledde,
Where daintie lookes no danger makes, nor nice desyre is fedde.
Where former ioyes do vade, and turne to passions strange,
Where al delights condemde are shut, in sharp repentāce grange(.)
Where settled sorrowe sits, with head hangde on her brest,
And wrings her hands for follies past, her present paines y^t prest.
Where Dolor ruthfull Dame, with sad Dispaire doth dwell,
Where Furies fierce doe swarme & flock, not distant farre from Hell.
Euen there in dolefull Den, driue forth I doe the day,
Whereas my painefull piercing woes, at no time finde delay.
Within whose troubled head, such throng of thoughts do rise,
That nowe on this, and then on that, in minde I still deuise.
Among great thoughts throwne vp, I downe will fet the least,
How syllie birde in prifon pente, tane from the Nurse in neast.
Doth ioye in that her lyfe, so much as though she might,
From wood to wood, or fiede to fiede, at pleasure take her flight.
By whome I learne how man, from Cradle aye brought vp,
In base estate that neuer felt the taste of pleasures Cup,
Doth holde himselfe so well, content with his degree,
That he in lyfe doth seldome seeke, his state more high to see.

Delightfull Discourses

But I as Byrde vnylke, that flew in prime her flight,
Through gallant groues & fertyle fields, in ioyes & sweete delight.
Which shall no sooner feele her selfe to be refraynde,
From her such wanted libertie as sometime she retaynde,
But forthwithall she doth, such inwarde woe conceyue,
That yeelding vp her pleasures past, her life therewith doth leaue.
When as the byrde in Cage, doth sporting sing and playe,
Who neuer found the place wherein, she felt more happy daye.
Loe thus the greater oft, are taught by things but finall,
To knowe what restless grieffe it breeds, from fortunes grace to fall.
I therefore wishe my lyfe, which all to long doth laste,
In symplest sort had euer bene, from tyme to tyme ypaste.
So I by custome should, haue likt my present paye,
Which now by tast of wrackfull change, in woe do wast awaye.

Omnis fortuna superanda ferendo est.

Of sufferance comes ease.

WHo wayles at paine of sorrowes deadly smarte,
By wayling much encreaseth sorrowes might:
In greatest griefes who shewes the quiets(t) harte,
By pacience driues sharpest grieffe to speedy flight.
Repine, grieffe growes, be still, grieffe soone decays:
Suffrance the salve for grieffe at all assayes.

As Balles if throwne gainst stones do soone rebounde,
But fast they stick, if cast they be at durte:
So griefs nought harme where yeelding none is found:
Once fainte, and then they cause some mortall hurte.
By prooffe and tryall, this most true we finde,
Least hurte by grieffe is done to stowtest minde.

Pacience and stowtneffe lodged in thy brest,
Shall voyde from thence, grieffe sorrow and vnrest.

A.M. Ut animo, sic amico.

¶ H. His

to sundry purposes.

¶ H. His Reply to his friend. A.M.

THe helthfull wight, with pleasure well may sing,
And courage hie to cheare the sicke may shewe :
But if diseafe his happy fstate should sting,
Those loftie tunes would faine and fall more lowe.
For Turrets tops that seemes to reach the Skyes,
By thundring stormes to shieuers smale are shaken,
The strongest holde where stowtest Souldiours lyes,
Mauger their might, more greater force hath taken.
The soundest shyp long toft with tempest, leakes,
In wrastling windes, the hugie Cables fayle :
The brafen peece surchargde with powder breakes,
And valiant hartes orewhelmde in woe, do quayle.
The craggy Clyftes by floodes are fret at length,
The hardened steele obeyes the hammers stroke,
The stiffest bow still bente, doth lose his strength,
Base Fortunes blowes, all ioy likewise doth choke.
How maye he then possesse a quiet minde,
That cause of rest doth feelde or neuer finde.

¶ H. to himselfe.

W Hom destiny shall denye,	What gaine by mourning got,
A happy lyfe to finde :	What lost by little care :
Why should he wayling lye,	When needs must light to lot,
With penfue hart and minde.	What destiny doth prepare.

E.iiij.

¶ Written

Delightfull Discourses

¶ Written to a most excellent Booke, full of rare inuention.

GOe learned booke, and vnto PALLAS sing,
Thy pleafant tunes that sweetely fownde to hie
For PAN to reache, though ZOYLVS thee doth fting,
And lowre at thy lawde, fet nought thereby.

Thy makers Mufe in fpight of enuies chinne,
For wife deuife, deferued praife shall winne.

Who views thee well, and notes thy courfe aright,
And fyftes eche fence that couched is in thee :
Muft needes extoll the minde that did thee dight,
And wifhe the Mufe may neuer weary bee.

From whence doth flowe fuch pithe in filed phrafe,
As worthieft witte may ioy on thee to gafe.

How much they erre, thy rare euent bewrayes,
That stretch their skill the Fates to ouerthrow :
And how mans wifedome here in vaine seekes wayes,
To fhun high powers that sway our states below.

Against whose rule, although we friuc to runne,
What IOVE forefets, no humaine force may fhunne.

But all to long, thou hidfte fo perfite worke,
Seeft not defyre, how faine fhe seekes to finde :
Thy light but loft, if thou in darkneffe lurke ?
Then shewe thy felfe and feeme no more vnkinde.

Vnfolde thy fruite, and fpread thy mayfters praife,
Whofe prime of youth, graue deeds of age difplaies.

Go choyce conceits, MINERVAS Mirrour bright,
With Rubics ritch yfret, wrought by the wife :

Purflod

to sundry purposes.

Purled with Pearle, and decked with delight,
Where pleasure with profite, both in their guise.
Discourse of Louers, and such as folde sheepe,
Whose sawes well mixed, shrowds miseries deepe.

Goe yet I say with speede thy charge delyuer,
Thou needst not blushe, nor feare the foyle of blame :
The worthy Countesse see thou follow euer,
Tyll Fates doe sayle, maintaine her Noble name.
Attend her wyll, if she vouchsafe to call,
Stoope to her state, downe flat before her fall.

And euer thanke thou him, that fyrst such fruite did frame,
By whome thy prayse shall liue, to thy immortall fame.

¶ Where Sorrowe is setled, delyght is banished.

THe Sable sadde bewrapped hath my lymmes,
(A fute most fyt for onc repleat with griefe.)
Whose strayed hart in fowrce of sorrowe swymmes,
Where wrackfull woes at no tyme finde reliefe.
Whose foode is feare, whose drinke is dolor deepe,
Whose sawce is sighes, whose tast sharpe passions are :
Whose rest is ruthe, where sorrowes neuer sleepe,
Whose comfort cliped is with cloudes of care.
Whose helpe is frozen, whose hap hath hard cuente,
Whose hope is queld with clogge of colde dispayre :
Whose trust is tyerd, whose toyle in vaine is spent,
Whose pensive plaintes but beate the barreyn ayre.
Where nought I finde, but drugges of bitter taste,
Whose dolefull dayes in darke annoye do waste.

F.j.

¶ The

Delightfull Discourses

¶ The complainte of a sorrowfull wight, founde languishing in a Forrest.

When spring in lyuely greene, eche fiede hath deckt anewe,
And strowde the foyle with flowers sweete of fundry kinds of What time the cheerefull buds, & blossoms braue in fight, (hewe.
Inuites the weary dilled minde, abroad to take delight.
Then I by fancie led, a tyme to sporte and play,
To Forrest fayre of pleasant ayre, began to take the way.
And as I past through out a Valley fayre and greene,
Where fundry sweete & rare delights, I earst had heard & seene.
All whuste I found it tho, such silence was there kept,
As if it midnight then had beene, and all thing founde had slept.
Whereat amazde I stooode, and listning long, might heare,
At last a dolefull founding voyce, with lowe lamenting cheare,
In shrubs hard shrowded by, a wofull wight there lay,
Whose corps through care & lingering grieffe, was wel ny worne away.
Where powring out his plainte he curst the tyme, and when
That fyrst on earth he placed was, to lead his lyfe with men.
Whose selfeloue seemth so sweete, that friendship yeeldes no tast,
And double dealing gaires such price, that plainenesse is displait.
Alas, quoth he the Babes, one wombe brought forth and bare.
Will nowe obiect, what are we bounde, the one to others care.
Whereas good nature bids, go meete thy friends distresse,
And beare some parte of his mishap, that he may beare the lesse.
If friend to friend thus doe, who faster friend should bee,
Then he (alas) in thy distresse, that nought will doe for thee.
Ah wofull man he sayth, thy lotte hath false thee so,
That sowerce of sorrowes thee besets, with waues of wailful wo.
When he where fauour most, thou shouldst by nature finde,
Doth causelesse shake thee of in care, & shewes himselfe vnkinde.
O wretch in dolor drencht, O minde with mone opprest,
O gulfe of grieffe, O sea of sighes, that straine the pensue brest.
If wel by Pen thou couldst, thy present passions shoue,
The hart that hardned nowe remaines, woulde soone relente I knowe.

But

to sundry purposes.

But sith my hap is such, as reape may no redresse,
Come forth you Forrest DRIADS all, your mournfull Tunes expresse.
Drawe neere you SATYRS sower, and straine your dolefull cries,
To wayle the woes of him (alas) in languor deepe that lyes.
Be witnesse woodes and Fields, ye Trees recorde my bale,
You NAIDES eke that haunt the Springs, repeate my wofull tale.
And say vnto the wight, that bydes vnfriendly bente,
How death would be so sweete to me, as ioy to his contente.
For better twere of bothe, then restlesse still remayne,
By ending quyte my lothed lyfe, to ende my lingering payne.
Here sparing further speeche, aside he cast his eye,
And synding me, as one dismayde, away he fought to flye.
Whose will when I perceaude, to shunne my sight full bente,
I to him stept, and askte the cause, that moude him to lamente.
Wherto no worde he gaue, but stands like one amazde,
And with a strange and gasty looke, long tyme on me he gazde.
His face was thinne and leane, his collour dim as leade,
His cheeks were wanne, his body weake, his eyes deepe sunck in head.
His hart fraynde, his minde toft, his wyt with woe nere worne,
A ruffull thing it was (alas) to viewe him so forlorne.
With deepe set sighe from brest, sent forth by inwarde payne,
His feeble voice and foltring tongue, he gan at last to strayne.
And thus to me he sayde : O what art thou in wo :
Me Myser wretche that here dost finde, with griefe perplexed so ?
Whose present state to learne, why dost thou thus require ?
Smale gayne to thee, great paine to me, to yelde to thy desire.
Yet sithe against my will, thine eares haue heard the plainte,
Which in this desarte place I paste, to ease my brest attainte.
Thus much at thy request, I further will reueale,
As for the rest this corps of mine, for euer shall conceale.
Whom earst a friend I founde, me causlesse hath forsaken,
What wouldst thou more this is the summe, that I with sighes am
But cruel fate I feare, doth force it so to be, (shaken.)
Aduē farewell, let this suffice, inquier no more of me.
Which saide away he goes, God knoweth a wofull wight,
And leaues me there with sorrow fraight, y^t fought to take delight(.)

Delightfull Discourses

¶ Of Fancie.

THe kindled sparkes of fyre, that Fancies motions moue,
Do force me feele, though I ne see, nor know not what is loue.
Defyre on ruth doth runne, imbracing griefe for game,
Whose ioye is like the Flies delight, that fries amid the flame.
It yeelds and mercy craues, yet wots not who makes warres,
The only thing it fees or knowes, is one that loue preferres.

¶ Answer.

You loue belike to freefe amid the flame,
To weepe in ioye, to ioy in great distresse :
To laugh in teares, to leape and yet be lame,
Midst greuous myrth & gladfome heauinesse.
To sinck in dread, and not to seeke redresse,
You TITIVS lyke doe play this wofull parte,
Your loue the Grype that tyers vpon your harte.

¶ Euer sought, neuer founde.

The more I striue, the stronger is my thrall,
The stronger thrall, the weaker still mine ayde :
The weaker ayde, the greater griefe doth fall,
The greater griefe, the more with doubt dismayde.

Where lyfe I reache, there dollor biddes me die,
In sweetest foyle, I straine the greatest Snake :
My cares increase, when comfort drawes most nie,
From dainty pray, I pearcing poyson take.

Still pynde in colde, I parched am with heate,
As fyre I flye, vpon the flame I runne :

In

to sundry purposes.

In swelting gleames, my chylly corps I beate,
Congealde to Ice, where shynes the cleereft funne.
Loe thus I lyue, and lyuing thus I dye,
Drownde in dispayre, with hope aduanced hye.

¶ A Poesie.

THe valiant minde, by venture gaines the Goale, Whyles fearefull wightes in doubt doe blow the coale.

¶ Answer.

BUt wary wightes, by wisedome shunne the snare,
When venterous minds through hast, are wrapt in care.

¶ Euery thing is as it is taken.

Some onely for disporte, a kinde of myrth doth rayse,
For which of some they finde dislyke, of some they purchase prayse.
The Tale that some clowte vp, with rude vnciuill fence,
Doth more delight the eares of some, then sweetest eloquence.
The Foole sometimes doth please, when wise aside are shake,
Then true it is that euery thing, is as men liste it take.

Who hath by knowledge skyll, of euery foote the length,
Or can he always hit the marke, y^t draws the greatest strength?
Some carpe at others factes, that nought themselues will vewe,
And some by high disdaine doe seeke, to mende APELLES shue.
What some in others spurne, themselues would not forsake,
But wylie Foxe from lofty Vine, doth vow no grapes to take.

A worde paste forth in sporte, to earnest oft doth turne,
So where there was no fire before, great flames on sodain burne(.)
F.ij. Not

Delightfull Discourses

Not one mans children all, eche Nature is not leeke,
But who hath mean to measure wil, shal giue the greater gleeke.
First looke then leape, the blind doth run in many a brake,
And eche thing still by prooue we see is as men list it take.

Who so doth rule his rage, by wifdoms sacred skill,
No doubt shal shunne ful great annoy, that follows rashnes still.
And who his tongue can stay, till place and time doe ferue,
His mind at large may better speake and greater praise deferue.
Though friends like friends would shade, the sunbeams for thy Yet al things are assuredly, as men them list to take. (fake,

But al not friends in deede, of friendships bounds that bostes,
Take heede, no houle may long indure, propt vp wth rotten postes.
Some rotten are at harte, yet beares a friendly face,
And vnder cloke of fawning shews, a Serpents sting thimbrace.
Tis hard to know of whom we certaine counte may make,
For though they smile, yet thee they deeme, as they thee list to take.

As they thee list to take, suche shalbe their reporte,
Malicious minds are euer prest against the vertuous forte.
Be chary in thy choice, least frawde thy faith abuse,
Of fundrie sectes embrace the best, the flattering flock refuse.
Thus warely runne thy race, eschew the lurking Snake, Imbrace the good, as for the rest, no force how they thee take.

¶ To his Lady of her doubtfull aunswere.

TWixt death and doubtfulnessse,
Twixt paine and pensiuenessse,
Twixt Hell and heauynesse,
Rests all my carefulnessse.

O vaine securitie,
That will not libertie,
Fye on that fantasie,
That brings captiuitie.

to sundry purposes.

My lyfe is lothfomneffe,
My pleasure pastimeleffe,
My ende your doubtfulneffe,
If you be mercyleffe.

In doubt is iعالofie,
Hope helpeth miserie,
Most women commonly,
Haue aunfwers readily.

¶ Helpe best welcome, when most needefull.

THe bitter smarte that straines my mated minde,
Through quelling cares that threate my woful wrack :
Doth prick me on against my wyll I finde,
To pleade for grace, or else to pine in lack.
As fainting soule fokt vp with sickly paine,
Prayeth Phisicks aide in hope of helth againe.

Whilste Sea roomes serues, the shipman feares no foyle,
In quiet Porte there needes no Pilotes Arte :
But when through wearie winters tiring toyle,
Cleere Sommers calmes to carefull clouds conuarte.
And streaming stormes at hand do danger threate,
Then Masters ayde is fought in perill great.

So I right Noble Peere and Lodestarre mine,
Whose Pynniss smale an vpright course hath ronned :
In seruice yours, am forced nowe in fine,
Mine ancors worne, my fayles and tackling donne,
In humblest wife your honors help to craue,
My foredriuen ship from swallowing vp to faue.

F.iiij.

You

Delightfull Discourses

You are the Hauen whereon my hope depends,
And I the Barck vpon the drie shore dryuen :
You eke the lañde that cheerefull Pilotte lends,
And I the wight, whom Seas to wrack hath giuen.
What resteth then, if Harbour you denye,
But that my shyp muft perishe, sinck and dye ?

For now to late to fownde some other shore,
And he that hath and should by nature ayde :
Withdrawes his hande, and sayth he may no more,
Loe thus alas, I liue lyke one difmayde.
Twixte death and doubt, still furdge vpon the fande,
Stayde vp by hope to light on fyrmer lande.

But oh, O me, where AVTVMNE fruitelesse flydes,
A barren hope to HIEMS falles by kinde :
In Haruest tyme, whose trauaile nought prouydes,
A nypping Winter shall be sure to finde.
So carelesse youth that wastes his yeares in vaine,
In age repents bereft of hope or gaine.

As yeares increafe, vncertaine hope seemes harde,
When sicknesse sharpe hath gathered greatest force :
Then Phisicks cure doth seeme a sweete rewarde,
Which you may yeelde, if please you take remorse.
My stepdame strange, I Fortune yet doe finde,
Which makes me more to dread some wrack behind.

For where I seeke the depth of hope to founde,
To helpe my selfe, and stay my credite still :
To fronte my course, doth crooked hap rebounde.
Through such I feare, as euer mente me ill.
Or else in state I stande the most accurst,
(If seruice long me shrowde not from the wurst.)

Though

to sundry purposes.

Though some be slowe to reache reliefe at neede,
And with delayes the matter will delate :
Yet Noble minde then sheweth it selfe in deede,
By gyuing strength vnto the weakned state,
I seeke no store to lyue and lye at rest,
I wishe but ayde in that I am opprest.

Which if you graunt, you shall great honor gayne,
And eke encourage those of yonger dayes :
With cheerefull hope themselues & friends to strayne,
To serue a wyght that so his seruauant stayer.
And I releast from wrackfull woes vnrest,
Will blase your praise tyll lyfe shall faile my brest.

¶ Of the Golden worlde.

THe golden worlde is past sayth some,
But nowe say I that worlde is come :
Now all things may for Golde be had,
For gayne of Golde, both good and bad.
Now honour hie for Golde is bought,
That earst of greater price was thought.
For Golde the Foole alofte doth rise,
And ofte is plaste aboute the wise.
For Golde the subtile shewe their skill,
For Golde the wicked winne their will.
For Golde who shunnes to wrest a wrong,
And make it seeme as right and strong ?
Who spares to pleade as pleaseth thee,
If bring thou doe a golden fee ?
The Fatherlesse is quite forgot,
Where golden giftes doe fall to lot.
For Golde the Wyddow is opprest,
And rightfull heyres are dispossesst.
Poore IRVS cause at dore doth stande,
If CRÆSVS come with Golde in hande.

G.j.

What

Delightfull Discourses

What mischiefe may almost be thought,
That now for Golde not daylie wrought?
A heape of ylles for Golde are clokte,
Yea vice for Golde hath vertue chokte.
For gayne of Golde the Flatterer smyles,
And on thee fawnes with fundry wyles.
I will not here through golden traps,
Say Louers light in Ladies laps.
But brieve to bee, what can you craue,
That now for Golde you may not haue?
Then truth to tell, and not to fayne,
Right now the golden worlde doth raygne.

¶ Of Golde.

O Gracious Golde,	Golde buyldeth townes,
Whofe glittering hie :	Golde maketh ioy :
Doth cheere and holde,	Gold cheereth clownes,
Eche gazing eie.	Golde quelth anoy.
The sweete delight,	Golde all can doe,
That dwelles in thee :	Golde raignes alone :
Doth spoyle eche spight,	Alas what woe,
And pouertee.	Where Golde is none.
Thou listes aloft,	As I poore wight,
Who late was lowe :	By prooffe doe see :
By thee Fooles oft,	Which gladly seeke,
The wise orethrow.	That will not bee.
What ioy, what gaine,	But well I were,
What worldly thing :	If I might catch,
Doth want to them,	Whyte syluer cleere,
That Golde doe bring ?	Which all men snatch.

¶ A.

to sundry purposes.

¶ A. W.

THe wante of Coyne so grypes my brest,
That what to doe I know not best,
I trudge, I toyle, I feeke, I suc,
But aye good hap bids me adue.

¶ Answer. H.

IF nipping neede LEGITTIMVS constraynde,
In hande to grype the heauie Hammer great :
With which through wante his Princely corps he paynde,
on stythic hard, in VVLCANS trade to beat.
If he (I say) of crowned king the sonne,
by fate was forste such bitter blastes to bide :
Dispaire not thou thy wrackfull race to runne.
for welth as shade from eche estate doth slide.
Pluck vp thy harte, thy hap not yet so harde,
since Princes great haue felt a fall more deepe :
King DIONISE from regall rule debarde,
for his reliefe a Grammer schoole did keepe.
By which thou mayste thy wandring minde suffice,
That Fortunes wheele now vp, now down doth rise.

¶ Of Friends.

AS fyre doth fine and seperate Golde from drosse,
And shews the pure and perfite from the vyle :
Right so is tryde, when nipping stormes doe tosse,
A faythfull friend, from such as meane but guyle.
Whylste Fortune smyles, and thou no wante dost feele,
Of friends no doubt thou shalt haue heaped store,
But if she once doe whyrle aside hir wheele,
They slinke away, as though vnknowne before.

G. ij.

Like

Delightfull Discourses

Lyke Doues that leaue the olde and ruynous towre,
And flocking flye to buyldings braue and new :
So fayned friends, when fortune seemes to lowre,
Their flight do take, and bids thee straight adew,
Thus he which earst had friends on euery side,
Not hauing one, alone doth now abide.

¶ Answer. E. L.

IF perfitte tryall might as soone be had,
Of perfitte men, as of the pure Golde :
It were not hard to know the good from bad,
Their difference soone might easilye then bee tolde.
For Fyre lesse than in an houres space,
Will finde the fault of Golde, and make it plaine,
But men haue meanes to counterfeyt such grace,
That they will aske at least a yeare or twaine.
And yet at last will not be tryde at all,
For some perchance will byde a touth or two,
And will not seeme to flye when you shall fall :
But offer you what they and theirs can doe.
Yet not so founde as they should be in deede,
But make a meanes to make you serue their neede.

¶ Reply to the same.

THat longer tyme the Friend than Golde should trye,
I neuer yet denide nor would defende :
How fayned friends do fayle, if fate doe wrye,
Is totall summe wherto my tale doth tende.
For euery thing hath certaine tyme I knowe,
The full effect to worke of Natures charge,
The tender twig in tyme a tree doth growe,
And little Babes in tyme doe proue more large.
Some fruite scarce rype, when some doe drop away,
Some bloume, some beare according to their kinde,

Some

to sundry purposes.

Some soone shoote vp, some longer space doe stay,
Eche taketh the time that Nature hath assignde.
The Marble stone in time by watery drops
Is pierced deepe, and eke in time doth fall,
The stately towres with fine and curious tops,
For time in time, no doubt tryes all in all.
Which triall firste, occasion seekes to make,
As fyre by heate the Golde doth fine and pure,
In neede likewise occasion men shall take,
A friend to try, from such as stande vnure.
But some a time will seeme to stay say you,
And after fayle, perceyuing further neede :
No doubt you here haue aynde the marke to true,
For suche is sure the fruite of subtile seede.
These friends are like to one that vndertakes,
To runne the race, whereby to gayne the prayse :
Who running well, at first, on sodaine flakes,
And in the midst his race leaues off and staves.
Not aye doth proue the glorious morning shoue
The fayrest day, ne all that shines is golde :
And therefore friends in deede are harde to knowe,
For some a storme or two, like friendship holde.
The flowres yet in tyme from weedes appeare,
Whose difference first in spring we scarce discern,
The sunne orecaust with clowde in time doth cleere,
And eke in time our friends from such we learne.
For as one tutch or two no perfite prooffe
Doth make of friends, no more doth Golde one heate.
Yet tyme vs tels who links, who lyes aloofe,
Who byrds doth yeelde, and who the bushe doth beate.
Wherefore I ende, as Golde by fyre is tryde,
So friends by prooffe at needefull tymes are spyde.

Delightfull Discourses

¶ Another way.

WHen once you haue false fortunes fickle wheele, perceyde with paine, and tryde with troubled toyle :
The found to see, and forged friend to feele,
it is not harde, for falsed hath the foyle.
If then you finde that Fortune stands your foe,
let wisedomel welde your wit, and all your wayes :
So fayned friends their fayth that doe forgoe,
shall be ashamed, and you attaine to prayle.
For though the wheele with care do cast you downe,
Yet PALLAS playes, when Fortune false doth frowne.

¶ To his Friend M. S.

IF friendship true be tryde when welth doth fayle,
from such as fayne, and flee if fortune lowre :
If he a friend that seemes not then to quayle,
but seekes to helpe and ayde his friend to powre.
My STAPLEE then a friend thou art in deede,
That helps thy friend in time of nipping neede.

¶ In mediocritie, most safetie.

AS meane in Musicke soundeth beste,
So meane estate liues most in reste.
The higher clymde, the fall more deepe,
The deeper fall, the doubler paine,
Declyning paine doth carefull keepe,
In man eche liuely limme and vaine.
Which prooues what change or chaunce doe fall,
Contented meane exceedeth all.

¶ To

to sundry purposes.

¶ To the same.

THe high estate is dangerous,
The poore degree is burdenous.
The welthie forte are couetous,
The needie soule is dolorous.
The youthfull Imps are prodigall.
The aged be to riches thrall.
The bolder men foolehard ye call,
And fearefull wightes are dastards all.
Then yll eschew, embrace things cleane,
Well fare the sweete and golden meane.

¶ That valiant hartes are desyrous to aspyre.

EChe valiaunt harte and Noble minde, with loftie courage hye:
The mightie Mountayne seekes to scale,
and lets the Molehill lye.

¶ Answer.

THe mounting minde that hafts to climbe, when Fortune whirles her wheele:
With double dolour is deprest,
if downe he chance to reele.

¶ Another waye.

TO climbe to high must needs be nought,
the feare to fall doth breede disease:
To sinke to lowe brings carefull thought,
dispayring payne can neuer please.
The golden meane giues quiet rest,
Who liues betwene extremes doth best.

G. iiij.

¶ To

Delightfull Discourses

¶ To his Friend E. R. of the Bee.

WHere as thy minde I see doth mounte, to buylde thy nest on hye :
I thinke it good in meaner sorte,
thy wings thou guyde to flye.
For loftie trees on Mountayne toppes, with euery blustering blaste
Are shaken fore, when trees below doe stande both firme and faste.
The Bee whose force but feeble is,
to Beastes of bigger powre :
Hir selfe doth feede with Hony swecte,
when greater taste things sowre.
Which prooues the meane with minde content,
more happy lyfe we see :
Than is to taste the sowre, and fitte
in feate of highe degree.
From thorny shrubs and barren foyle,
fwete sap the Bee doth sucke :
When bigger beastes in fertyle Fields, with nipping stormes are stucke.
And he within his symple Cell,
doth dwell in safety founde :
When such as seeke to fayle aloft,
in dole are oft times drounde.
Seeke not therefore with troubled minde,
at stately porte to riue :
But liue content as doth the Bee,
within his homely Hiue.
So shall thy foode be Honie sweete, though Fortune smile or frowne :
And eke in safetie shalt thou sit,
when higher tumble downe.

¶ Sure

to sundry purposes.

¶ Sure counsell, founde friendsbip.

OF Louers restles lyues I lyfte not wryte,
Let learned heads describe their painefull plight,
But playne in termes, I wishe thee euen so well,
As those that can fine Tales for Louers tell.

Whose friendly meaning if thou wilt receaue,
Deteft disloyall loue, to Vertue cleaue,
And seeke by honest meanes thy state to stay,
The vertuous lyfe doth fyldome bring decay.

Counte not the byrds that vndisclosed bee,
Waygh words as winde that yeelds no certaintie,
For polisht words that deedes doe neuer yeelde,
May likened be vnto the barreyn Felde.

Proude in youth, thy aged yeares to keepe,
And let fayre speeche go lulle the fonde a sleepe,
Sir MACHIAVELL such cunning nowe hath tought,
That wordes seeme sweete when bitter is the thought.

Whilst youth, strength, skyll, welth, friends & coyne wil stretch,
Thou fayre art borne, by many a guilfull fetch,
But if these helps but once beginne to fainte,
Adieu farewell, colde comfort findes complainte.

Take heede therefore, retyre in time from those,
To serue their turnes, that teach their tongues to close.
Whose golden shews, although do promise much,
In prooffe fall out but Copper in the touch.

H. j.

¶ They

Delightfull Discourses

¶ They performe not best, that promise most.

WHat holde in hope, or trust to fayre allure,
Shee that my sweetest yeares beguylde can tell:
By whome I learne there is no way so sure,
Ne speedier meane to guyde a man to hell.
Loe, he that liste such fayned hope to prooue,
Shall subiect liue, and nere raigne ouer loue.

The pleasure of her piercing eyes methought,
Should be the lightes that leade to happinesse:
Alas I was to bolde, but she more nought,
To false suche fayth, and meaning nothing lesse,
What heauen is hid in loue, who seekes to see,
Must sue and serue a better Saint than shee.

Though tyme hath stayed the rage of my desyre,
Yet doth her sight renewe my festred wounde:
I curffe the arte that causde me to aspire,
In hope of truthe, where no trust could be founde.
But tyll my soule shall breake this carefull gayle,
Loue may not maystred be, nor I preuayle.

¶ Bewtie the bayte of Vanitie.

A Flattering forme hath shoues that soone doe passe,
And vade away as doth the wythered grasse.
The more it hastes to reache the rypest yeares,
The more it fayth, and worse the forme apares.
Of pleasant Flowers, the Rose that hath no Peere,
The Violets freshe, and Lyllies whyte and cleere,
Doe not alwayes retaine their hewe and sente,
And flourish still with smell most redolente.
So though thou seeme of feature passing all,
And bearest the forme and fame as principall,

Whose

to sundry purposes.

Whose bewtie shewes, hath blasde thy shape in sight,
Which thou in Glasse to view, takest great delight.
Yet tyme on poollisht forme shall furrows plowe,
And wrythed wrinckles peere on blemisht browe.
That lothe thou shalte, to note thy changed hewe,
And hate thy forme in Mirror bright to viewe.
Loe Ladie fayre, that bewtie is but vaine,
Experience shewes, when Vertue voyde of staine,
Doth florisse freshe, whome if thou doe embrace,
The more she growes, the greater is her grace.

¶ Of Fortune.

O Fortune false how double are thy deedes,
Thy painted Flowres are nought in prooffe but weedes.
Who are brought downe, by thy most frowarde frownes,
Still subiect liue, and trouble them redownes,
To slipper happes annexed are their dayes,
To Lyons force, their bodyes are but prayes.
What so they winne by meritte or deserte,
Is from them rest, by power that doth subuerte.
Now welthy men doe tell the wifest tales,
And muck is made an equall weyghing schales.
No reason yet, but right should be of force,
And vertue would that wante should finde remorse.
But as the tossed Barke bydes better blyffe,
And sharpest thrall in tyme released is,
And as the feeble Reedes are rente by Seas,
Yet spring againe, when swelling waues appeafe.
So hope I will, though now the ebbe be lowe.
A spring in time with former course may flowe.

Delightfull Discourses

¶ A Sonet.

IF wayghtie burthens may be light,
Or fayre deniall det requite :
If Justice can be termed error,
Or drosse for good and perfite treasor.
If Maye may be without delyte,
Or Snowe of other hewe than whyte,
If Cunning can be without skill,
Or women without headstrong will,
If Pardon where there is no fynne,
Or Losse where euery man doth winne,
If Paradise in Hell you see,
Or sylvent whereas women bee.
Then shall not Loue be termed hate,
Nor lowe degrec the happiest state,
But all this must prooue contrarie,
And therfore Loue is Loyaltie.
Flee it, and it will flee thee,
Follow it, and it will follow thee.

¶ *To her Louer, that made a conquest of her,
and fled, leaving her with childe.*

AT stryfe to whome I might, commit my secreet teares :
My heart the Mountaynes fight,
and hollow ECCHO feares.

I doubt the DRYADES,
amids the Forrest chafe,
And thinking on the Seas,
I dread the Marmayds grace.

What

to sundry purposes.

What shall I trust the Skyes?
then me the windes bewray:
Poore foule whom Love denyes, eche caytife doth betray.

Ha heauy hart, thy meede,
O tell, tell out thy minde:
Ponder his fylthie deede, that left his shame behinde.

And lyke a Cowarde fledde, fearing the chylde vnborne:
Whose mother hee should wedde,
that hath the Babe forsworne.

Was euer Mayde so madde, that might her fayth forgo?
Was euer boy so badde,
to vse a mayden so?

His teares did me beguyle,
and cleane opprest my powre,
As doth the Crocodile,
in seeking to deuoure.

Howe could I well denie,
when needs it must be so:
Although a shamefull I, should haue a shamelesse no.

O faythlesse friend my guylte,
that first with guyle began:
O foolishe friend that spylte,
her mirror on the man.

H.iiij.

What

Delightfull Discourses

What hath thy Country done, or natiue soyle a noyde :
To force thee it to shonne, wherein thy Louer ioyde.

No forrein Hauen can hide,
ne colour thine intent :
If lyfe in Babe abide,
that doth thy fault present.

And when thy fame hath worne, within th'ITALIAN colte :
Thou shalt be laught to scorne,
of them that loude thee moſte.

The Gods will haue a ſhare,
in gyuing him his hier :
That faythleſſe falſly ſware,
and proude himſelfe a lier.

And I thy mortall foe,
by fylthie luſt beguyld :
To wreake me of my woe,
will flay thy filly childe.

In ſtead of quiet graue,
whercin his corſe ſhould reſt :
Thy Impe his hearſe ſhall haue,
in bowels of a beaſt.

My daintie tamed wombe,
that to thy ſhare befell :
Shal finde no doubt a tombe, amids the mayds in hell.

¶ Being

to sundry purposes.

¶ *Being burdened to fayne his good will,
he answereth thus.*

IF mine thy little care,
if thine my restlesse state,
If thine the brunts in brest I beare,
of mine to loue or hate.
Then trie thou shouldst to true,
that falshood naught did frame :
Though now my smarts thou list not rue,
but makes my grieffe thy game.
But out alas I die,
this change is nothing so :
For I in languishe still doe lye,
and fawne on thee my foe.
Who smiles to see my smarte,
and laughes when I doe weepe :
Regarding naught my faythfull harte,
yet from me dost it keepe.
Thus harte to faine vnskilde,
in being whole is broke :
In health is hurte, aliuie is kilde,
by dinte of dolors stroke.
And being mine, is stolne,
and led by lyking lust :
Doth leaue the waye of certaine stay,
and leane to tickle trust.
Thou sayst I doe not loue, would God thou didst not lye :
Such fond affects may nothing moue,
such one thou sayst as I.
The Sages sure were wise,
yet forced now and then :
By flashing flames of CVPIDS fyre,
to shewe themselues like men.

H.iiij.

Dame

Delightfull Discourses

Dame Natures force will shewe,
what so therfore befall :
Tis sure my simple state so lowe,
thou dost mislike with all.
My thoughts doe mounte on hie,
though Fortune seeme but base :
Whose yeelding walles before thee lye,
to reare or downe to rase.

¶ Change of Country, shall not change fancie.

TO syfte my fate in forrein soyle,
a time though I depart :
Yet distaunce none, ne tyme, nor toyle shall pluck from thee my hart.
But as I earst vnfaynedly, haue vowde me wholly thyne :
So will I stande assuredly, howe ere the worlde encline.

¶ Where abilitie fayleth, wyll suffyceth.

IF knowledge mine could compasse wylling will,
To sounde her fame, so well as deedes deserue :
Or if in Verse by prayse of Poets skill,
I able were to wryte what I referue.
Then should my pen put forth what now I holde,
And to the worlde her vertues rare vnfolde.

But fithe in me such sacred lore doth fayle,
I leaue the fame to SOPHOS learned brayne :

As

to sundry purposes.

As one whose bare and naked Muse doth quayle,
To vndertake her glory to explyne.

Leaft lack of skill that might in me appeere,
Should clipse the light which now doth shine so cleere.

A perfit Pearle it selfe doth shewe so well,
That naught it needes a foyle to blafe the fame :
Her prayse lykewife, the rest doth fo excell,
That finer wittes will spred her Noble name.

What should I then vpon her feature stande,
Which shewes it selfe lyke sunne against the sande ?

Her curious shape, who views and doth not prayse,
In Noble minde she second is to none :
Not Fortune, but deserts, her fame doth rayse,
For Fortune bowes to Vertues loftie throne.

Where loe she fetled sits, in seate so bright,
As HESPER cleere with gleames of glittering light.

¶ Mans impietie, faynes false Deitie.

LUst long is faynde a God of loue to bee,
Whose peeuishe power some deeme is dangerous.
A cunning Archer that could neuer see,
Set forth he is, with shaftes right perillous.

A wanton winged boy forfooth he is,
And VENVS sonne, whom she doth clip and kisse.

Down from the Heauens he shoots the flaming dartes,
That Fancie quickly burnes with quenchelesse fyre :
Bereauing Reason quite in all her partes,
Preferring wyll with doting fond desyre.

Is this a God? no, no, a Diuell sure,
To sylthie lust that doth the weake allure.

I.j.

For

Delightfull Discourses

For Gods to Vertue, not to vices winne,
Their powers prouoke to good and not to yll :
Tis gainst their kinde to foster fylthie finne,
Eche heauenly grace, doth heauenly giftes fullfill.
Then you that fayne DAN CVPIDE is a God,
Recante in tyme, leaft IOVE reach forth his rod.

¶ In loue smale iarres, sometime breede best content.

WHat state more sweete, more pleafant or more hie,
Then loues delight, where hartes doe ioynly ioye ?
If vyle fufpect, feare and iclofie,
With gawling grudge did not the fame annoy.
Yet where this fowre, with sweete fomedeale doth blende,
Loues perfection oft it doth amende.

For thirft the water fauourie makes to seeme,
And after fasting, meate is had in price :
He knowes not peace, nor can thereof esteeme,
That in the warres hath neuer broke the Ice.
Hope is reuiude, and fhakes of forrowes past,
When feruice long doth reape rewarde at laft.

Diffaunce of Friends maye fuffred be with ease,
When fafe returne exiles eche former feare :
The farther of, the more doth meeting please,
Things hardly had, obtaynde, are holden deere.
Defpayre not then, though eyes debarred bee,
From that fayre fight, the hart doth howerly fee.

¶ What

to sundry purposes.

¶ What Nature feuereth, Arte hardly ioyneth.

IN fayth doth frozen IANVS double face,
Such fauour finde, to match with pleafant Maye :
May Horie HIEMS now fweete bliffe imbrace,
Where fertyle Iune by flatte repulfe had nay.
No furely no, though iealous heades mifdeeme,
A falfe vntroth to me the fame doth feeme.

For Frost with Fyre may neuer long agree,
And Maye by courfe ought mayntaine VENVS right :
When fhyuering IANVS doth denie we fee,
The pleafing fporte that May would moft delight.
Then iealous flander flut thy chaps for shame,
Depraue them not, whofe deedes are voyde of blame.

Since fprinkling fhowres of fweete AVRORAES fludde,
In HIEMS raigne are dryed vp with colde :
Whofe Syluer drops bedewes the blowming budde,
And makes the fertyle foyle her fruite vnfolde.
Who can belecue? not I, I vowe in deede,
That IANVS olde fhould gaine fuch youthfull meede.

¶ He wyfbeth well to the Crabbe and Maple Tree in Milfeelde, for the Ladies sake that met there vnder them.

THe cheerefull byrde that skips from tree to tree,
By skilfull choyfe doth roouft and rest at night :
Although by wing and will he may go free,
Yet there he pearkes, where moft he takes delight.
As Thrush in thorne, and golden Finch in Fearnie,
Great byrds in groues, the fmale in bufhie hedge :
The Larke alowe, in loftie tree the Hearne,
And some in Fenne, doe shrowde themfelues in fedge.

I.ij.

So

Delightfull Discourses

So some men boſt in Bayes, whoſe branch they beare,
Some Hawthorne holde, as chiefe of their delight :
Some wofull wights, the wretched Willows weare,
Some Roſes reach, and ſome the Lyllies white.
Some Plane tree praife, as great DARIUS ſonne,
Whoſe oft recourſe thereto, doth wel expreſſe,
That vertues riſe therein this Prince had wonne,
To lyke the ſame about the reſt I geſſe.
The Oliander eke, whoſe Roſelike floure,
Fayre POLIXENE ſo paſſing well did pleaſe :
Some liſt aloft, and ſome the Pien pure,
Yet trees I know that farre ſurmounteth theſe.
Not for their daintie fruities, or odoures ſweete,
Ne yet for ſumptuous ſhewe that others yeelde :
But for the Ladies fakes, which there did meeete,
I giue them prayſe as chiefeſt in the fielde.
O happy trees, O happy boughes, whoſe ſhade
Iſhrouded hath ſuch Noble vertuous wightes :
By whom you were, and are a Mirror made,
Who of your ſelues doe yeelde no great delights.
O fertile ground, in yeelding wiſe that lends,
Such cauſes great of Ladies perſite ioyes,
O bliſſefull place ſo fit for faithfull friends,
In pleaſures ryfe, to rid them from anoyes.
What wonder may it be, to thoſe ſhall heare,
In Maple hard, or crooked Crabbe tree ſowre :
Such ſugred talke, ſuch ieſts, ſuch ioyfull cheare,
Such mylde affects, as if t'were CVPIDS bowre ?
Nowe ſith theſe Noble Nimphes ybreathed haue,
Vpon theſe plants, in vttering forth their minde :
If any ſecke their ſecrecie to craue,
High LOVE I pray theſe trees may ſhewe their kinde.
Help SATYRS eke, you Gods that keepe the wood,
The poyſoning breath of BOREAS rough reſiſt :
And thou whoſe ſyluer drops bedewes eche bud,
Reſrefhe theſe trees with ſweete AVRORAES miſt.

to sundry purposes.

And LOVE if thou in Milfeelde shew thy might,
Conuert them soone, to fruites of more delight.
That Maple may be Mulberie,
And Crabbe tree eke a Medler be.

¶ Being charged with finenesse, he answereth thus.

Not fine good Lady mine,
but playne as playne may be :
Your curious hed may finenesse frame,
it longeth not to me.
My symple meaning plaine,
not carued with mincing stile :
Vnfayned friendship seekes to shew,
deuoyde of frawde or guile.
No GNATOS parte I play,
ne like COREBVS crue :
By g'losing words to seeke to painte,
or publishe more than true.
My cheefe delight to please,
is all which I desire :
With nising Nimphes I list not deale, whose lookes aloft aspire.
Plaine truthe aye yeelds such trust,
as needes no fined phrase :
And my delight hath lesse desire,
Dame bewties beames to blafe.
Whose heafte in harte I holde,
and will till time I die :
Yet truth might truely match delight,
with things that seeme more hie.

*But needelesse here to tell,
What all men sees right well.
Where nicenesse fine is fled,
Doth vertue spring and spread.
Let finenesse then be plaste,
Where finenesse is embraste.*

Delightfull Discourses

¶ Such Saintes, such seruice.

THy countnance change, though clokt in couert fort,
Not all things well, long since did make report.
Though thou vnkinde, and twife vnkinde againe
To me thy friend, wouldst not imparte thy paine.
See yet at last, how tyme the truth hath tolde,
What thou wouldst not, loe time doth here vnfolde.
No doubtfull drift whereon demurre dependes.
So clofe is kept, that time not tries and endes.
And art thou change? doth fanfie so perfwade?
To heape thy harme, doe secrete flames inuade?
Wilt thou from me so hide thy cause of pine?
Hast thou forgot, I rest still wholly thine?
Where is become thy manly minde, which late
Could so dehort thy friend, in fraile estate?
May one so well approou'd in PALLAS feelde,
By view of sypmple peece, seeme thus to yeelde.
Shall Buffard blinde, thy constant dealing daunt?
Arte thou so fonde, with carren Kyte to haunt?
Or wilt thou stoupe, and bend thy selfe to serue,
A thanklesse Trull, whose deeds right naught deserue?
Whose peeuish pride, descrites the Pecoocks grace,
Though she God wot, be farre more vile and base.
Naught else but wante of wyt, makes pride perfume,
The feete well viewd, downe fals the Pecoocks plume.
Whose owne conceyte, so dimmes her dazeled sight,
That deeme she doth for day, the duskiſhe night.
To base she is for thee to lure and call,
Though she by lofty lookes would conquer all.
Thy foode to fine her fylthy gorge to fill,
Of daintie pray to iudge, she hath no skill.
By course of kinde, she doth for carren craue,
Be rulde by me, her diet let her haue.

Doe

to sundry purposes.

Doe way the Kyte, that so doth scratch and scowle,
My Keeper kepe henceforth some finer fowle.
For looke as vessel aye, yeelds certaine taste
Of licoure, such as fyrst therein was plaſte.
So dunghill byrdes, on dunghill ſtill we finde,
To ſhewe the branch whence fyrst they came by kinde.
Caſt of therfore thy care and changed cheare,
Call home thy hart, let woonted plight appeare.
Hoyſe vp thy fayles, and launch from wrackful ſhore,
Who runnes on rockes, oft bruſed is full fore.

¶ I follow what ſtyeth from me.

I Viewe the fertile tree, but fruite I none may get :
Moſt daintie foode I ſee,
yet ſtarue for wante of meate.

Where drinke ſtands me before,
there greateſt droughth I take :
My thirſt encreaſt the more,
when moſt I would it ſlake.

So hunger ſtryues to feede,
when hap withholdſ repaſt,
So thirſt craues drinke with ſpede,
when thrall ſayth ſtay a caſt.

Thus TANTALS toyle I trie, againſt the ſtreame that rowe :
As hope would heaue me hie, diſpaire doth ſinke me lowe.

Delightfull Discourses

¶ No grieffe to wante of due regarde.

WHere forrow sunck in breast, hath sòkt vp euery ioye,
What comfort there but cruel care, the source of sharpe anoy ?
Adieu delightfull dayes that wretch right well may say,
Whose good endeouour made him dreame, till wakt wth cold decay.
Adieu deluding hope, that lulde thee so on sleepe,
As sleepe thy fences so bereaude, that waking yet dost sleepe.
Sith all the fruite thou findest, for long imployed paine, (refraine.
Falles out but brakes & brambles sharpe, how mayst thou teares
When ruth is made rewarde, for fayth that fauour sought,
What hart can choose but pine away, in plaint & pensiuè thought?
And curffe eche practise still, through drift of glosing guiles,
That dandled on true meaning minds, by frawde & hellish wiles.
To serue their turnes tyll they, vnto the bones are worne,
And then on sodaine shake them off, in greatest neede forlorne.
Most like the wormes that feede vpon the kernels sweete,
Forsaking huske when foode is spent, to perishe vnder feete.
So they the hartes of men, doe gnawe in peeces smale,
When youth and coine are both consumde, then leaues them to their
As some by to much prooffe, haue tryed all to true, (thrale.
Enforst to bid their golden time, so fruitlesse spent adiewe.

¶ Of Anger.

A Poyson piercing to the death,
A Traytor to the lyfe :
A Foe to friendships constancie,
a friend to deadly stryfe.
Armed agaynst good counsels force,
weake in aduerfitie :
A spoyler of such guiltlesse blood,
as is condemde by thee.
A troubled wyt, a reaklesse hande, a wrathfull hart to spill :

A

to sundry purposes.

- A partiall Iudge, a iealous wyfe,
where anger hath her will.
A wastefull purffe, a greedie Foe,
a false suspecting thing :
A tickle stay, a prowde disgrace,
a cruell Serpents sting.
A whip to ease, a rack to rule,
a furie to good rest.
A black infecting Spring they saye,
that poysons man and beast.
A hastie heate, a burning flame,
a wylde deuouring whelpe :
A forcelesse winde, a furie short,
and last a silly helpe.

¶ A New yeares gyfte.

- L Long may you lyue, and happy yeares enioye,
A LAmong your friends, to staye in bliffull state
D Deuoyde of Foes, safe shrowded from annoye.
I In all your workes : God graunt you happy fate,
K Kindle your care to compasse heauenly things :
P Presse downe the worlde, let not his power preuayle.
E Esteeme him not, a Syrens song he sings.
M Most happy they, where most his flatteries sayle.
B Beginne no acte, but fyrst foresee the ende :
R Reache forth your hande to helpe the needie still,
O Obserue such rules as may your state defende.
O Offence forbear: feare euer to doe ill.
K Knowe God and seeke his holy hefts to holde,
E Example giue, to make the good more bolde.

K.j.

¶ An

Delightfull Discourses

¶ Another.

L L Et wifedome welde your witte and all your wayes,
A A Among the best your credite twill enhaunce :
D Detest eche Vice, by Vertue purchase prayse,
I In Noble mouldes, a Noble minde aduaunce.

M M March on with those gainst frayle desyres that fight,
A And gayne the Gole where glorye great doth dwell :
R Resist eche wrong, endeuour to doe right,
I Imbrace good will of such as wilhe you well.

S Suspend to deeme the worst, what euer breede,
A And poyse eche poynte before you verdit giue,
V Vntill you fyft the depth of doubts in deede,
I It skill shall shewe to let the matter liue.

L Last beare in minde as course doth change the yeare,
E Euen so all Natures workes in time doe weare.

¶ Another.

L Lay downe your Pens, that pen vnworthy prayse,
A Aduaunfing Dames which naught may claime by right :
D Direct your course a Ladies fame to raise,
I In eche respect that well deserues your light.
G GRACE is a gifte deuyne giuen from aboue,
C Cancell the scrowles that others praise pretende :
A All writs are voyde that substance none doe proue,
V Vertue and blood, this Lady both commend.
E Eche perfite good in her doth fymely rest,
N Noble by byrth, by Nature affable,
D Disposed well, all ill she doth detest,
I In euery action modest and stable.

S Set shape aside, where Vertue hath no place,
H Here shape and Vertue both are ioynde in GRACE.

¶ An

to sundry purposes.

¶ Another.

T TYme and trust doth trie both weake and sure,
O O blifful hap that trust in time maye reache :
T The patients paine which sicknesse doth procure,
H Hath health or ende, at last to be his leache.
E Effects (alas) I see doe fall out harde,
L Loft labor reapes the crop of lymgering griefe,
A And friendships force, through fallhoode is debarde.
D Despite denies deferte to reache reliefe,
I I see some smyle as they were gyrt with gladnesse,
S Stayde vp by hope, though drencht in deepe dispayre :
P Preferring sporte, but daunted downe with fadnesse.
E Enjoying nought, yet faine to flye in th'ayre.
K Kept farre from you (God graunt) all such annoye,
E Embraste to be with them that lyue in ioye.

¶ An Epitaph.

WHat hydes this hearfe but quiet filente reste,
The surest ende of his vncertayne time :
Whome neyther sworde, nor fyre, nor age opprest,
But to his Ghost gaue way, in haste to clime
Aloft, loe here the iustice of such fatall breath,
To haue a God the author of his death ?
Fayth and good nature, honor death and lyfe,
The Noble harte procureth fauour molte,
These markes, these flowres of his age are ryfe,
Wherein both foule and shrine may iustly boiste.
Where his desyres lodge, the Gods can tell,
Here lyeth the corse that liued and died so well.

K.ij.

¶ A

Delightfull Discourses

¶ A Dreame.

TO clime the high and hauty hyll,
Where Poets preace for praife by skyl,
I list no labour wafte :
The water Nimphes I neuer vewde,
Nor Ladies of the Lake perfewde,
That poore ACTEON chaſte :
King ARTHVRS Knights long ſince are fled,
In force that did excell,
And all thoſe Ladies nowe lye dead,
Whoſe lyues olde Poets tell.
 Reuealing, their dealing,
 I purpoſe not to wryte :
 But dreaming, a ſtraunge thing
 Loe heere I doc recyte.

A fayre Pauillion finely pight,
In ſleepe appeared in my ſight,
Amidſt whereof in greene and white,
 The Goddeſſe fate of all delight,
Befet about with Ladies true,
Which did to her ſuch ſeruice due,
As fewe I deeme, the like hath ſeene,
 Idone to any earthly Queene.
 Her Nimphes all they were,
 Of ſuch comely cheere,
 HELENS face, may giue place,
 Where they appeere.

Theſe Ladies on this Goddeſſe bright,
Attendance gaue both daye and night,
 To worke what ſhe would will :
Some ſitting heere, ſome ſtanding there,
As for the tyme they placed were,

According

to sundry purposes.

According to their skill :
For VENVS then in Maiestie,
Me thought at Banket fate,
Attended on most curiously,
As best befeemde her state,
Some seruing,
Some caruing,
In Office as they stooode,
Some playing,
Some finging,
With glad and cheerefull moode.

That sure me thought in Heauen I was,
To see this fight it so did passe,
But at the last, this Banket past,
Of Suters then a Noble route
There did appeare, with drooping cheare,
Befeeching VENVS them to heare,
Who straight enclynde, with wylling mynde
To peise the playntes that eche put out.
Wherewithall kneelde downe,
A wight of renowne,
Who cryde thus, O VENVS,
Let fate ceafe to frowne.

HAue pyttie on her painefull plight,
Whose lyfe is led without dellight,
In sighes and sorrows still:
My youth faide she with age I waste,
For wealth my Parents me so plaste,
God knoweth against my will.
With that another stept in place,
And craude with wayling voyce,
O Noble Goddeffe of thy grace,
Graunt me my wilhed choyce.
Thus seeking, Dams liking,

K.ijj.

They

Delightfull Discourses

They call on VENVS hie :
Still fuing, renewing,
Their plaintes with watry eie.

Some out doe crie on ieloufie,
And some of great vncourtesie,
With teares complaine, that finde difdaine
Where they haue loued faythfully.
Another forte, doe eke reforte,
Exclayming lowde on falfe reporte,
Whereby their fame, and Noble name
Without defert, oft brute doth blame.
And fome Ladies fay,
Their Lords runne afray,
Whofe wanting, and fcaunting
Oft works their decay.

AS thus in courfe eche made his plainte,
AI wofull wretch through loue attainte,
In preafe my felfe did vaunte :
And vnto VENVS as I thought,
I hafted faft, and her befought,
My Ladies loue to graunte.
But out alas, euen therewithall
A fodaine thundring noife :
As heauen and earth fhould faile and fall,
My fprites from sleepe did raife.
Then waking, hart aking,
I languifht lay in wo,
Bewayling, the fayling,
Of wyfhed purpofe fo.

And to my felfe loe thus I faide,
What fraunged fight hath me difmaide.
May Vifions rare, or dreames declare.
Such fodaine change from ioy to care.

From

to sundry purposes.

From great delight, such moning cheare,
May Goddeffes abide to heare ?
No, no, naught else but fanſie ſure,
My yeelding harte doth lead and lure.
 Aye the wight to minde,
 Where loue doth me binde,
 Whoſe ſeruaunt, attendant
 The Gods me aſſigne.

¶ Loue asketh loue.

I Sawe of late a wofull wight,
That wyllow twigges did winde to weare :
Whoſe face declarde the penſiſe plight,
Which he through loue did preſent beare.
He lookte aloft as though he would
Haue clymed to the ſtarry ſkies,
But ſtill he ſtood as though he could
Not once liſt vp his heauie thies.
His feathered hands he forced forth,
And thither fayne he would haue fledde,
But wofull man it was no worth,
For all his limmes were lade with ledde.

*You are the bright and ſtarrie ſkye,
I am the man in painefull plight :
My limmes are lade I cannot flye,
My wings may not ſuſtaine my weight.*

I reade howe loue did GISMOND wounde,
The childe of TANCREDE SALERNE king :
Her fauour GVISTARDE conſtante founde,
She fancied elſe no other thing,
For riches nought, nor for his wealth,
Whereof he had but little ſtore,
His vertue was her onely health,
She likte that well, ſhe ſought no more,

K.iiij.

They

Delightfull Discourses

They had their hoped hap and ioye,
If TANCRED could contente him so,
But he by working their annoy, e,
Vnto himselfe brought greateſt wo.

*You are that Giſmond fayre and bright ;
Would I had Guiſtards vertuous life,
And Tancred chaſt cleane out of ſight,
Then would I wyſhe for ſuch a wife.*

Some ſaye howe LVNA loued one,
Of lowe eſtate and little fame,
By name yclipt ENDIMION,
Whoſe loue was quite deuoyde of blame.
In LAËMI hill it thus befell,
She ſawe him ſit all ſadde alone,
Tis I (quoth ſhe) I knowe full well,
For whom he mournes and makes his mone.
She ſhamed not of LAËMI hill,
Nor yet of Louers ſimple ſtate,
But ſoone conſentes vnto his will,
And him did chooſe to be her mate.

*O Luna looke vpon thy Loue,
Endimion makes his mone to thee :
Be not abaſht, let pittie moue,
That loue for loue may yeelden bee.*

¶ The variable thoughts of a Lover.

I Liue in hope and yet deſpayre,
Reioyſing moſt when grieſe doth growe :
I mounte aloft aboute the ayre,
Yet lead my life in LIMBO lowe.

I neuer ſeeke, though much I finde,
Yet finde I nought and ſtill doe ſeeke :

to sundry purposes.

I see what best contents my minde,
When most in minde I doe mislecke.

One holdes me in captiuitie,
So sure that I ne once may fwerue :
Albeit I liue at libertie,
As free from bands that I deserue.

R. T.

THe shyp that late I sawe beare loftie sayle,
Deepe lanchd in the waues of waters wilde :
Whose courage stowte I deemde no storme might quayle,
When I her viewde so fast and fyrmely fielde.
With tempest tost, is forst now sayle to streeke,
And in her prime doth houering harbour seeke.

¶ Answer.

THough streaming stormes, force ship to harbor haste,
To whom the Seas with rigor great threates wrack :
Whose cables cut, and ankers worne to waste,
Is forste streeke sayle in her so great a lack.
When NEPTVNE yet with Septer plaste in hande,
Shall calme the furious rigour of the Flood :
This Shyp repayrde, may safely sayle to lande,
Nought dreading EOLVS breth, that her withstood.
So H. doth hope his Howlke such porte shall finde,
When stormes be past, as will content his minde.

¶ Another waye.

LEt none mislike a man for his mishap,
But thinke how chance doth check the greatest might :
AENEAS he, VLISSES worthy wight,
By lande and seas, did danger great entrap,
None for deserts are lulde in Fortunes lap.
Chance roubles vs rounde, and reaks ne wrong nor right,
Ne lewde is he on whom lewde luck doth light.

L.j.

Was

Delightfull Discourses

Was not IOBE iust, though sòkte in forrowes sap.
They erre that deeme all goes as men deferue,
At length AENEAS ranne his weary race :
VLISSES eke and IOBE, God did preferue,
So I poore wretch whom Fortune doth disgrace,
Do hope thylke God will guyde my crased barge,
Which beates the seas, whilst none of her takes charge.
B.

¶ Godlynesse passeth ryches.

THE slender store that verteous wights possesse,
More worth then is the wickeds great excessse.
Yet strange to see what toyle some worldlings take,
For ryches vaine, that soone will them forsake.
Whose greedie guttes, no reason may suffice,
The muck on moule so blinded hath their eyes.

¶ His answere to one that wrote, faynte hartes that feare to synne, fayre Ladyes suldome winne.

HE much more valiaunt is,
whose steps are slow to sinne :
Then who so seekes vnlawfull meanes,
his Ladies loue to winne.
And greater prayse deferues,
his will that can subdue :
Than thou which boldly brags, to gaine
the thing thou well mayst ruc.
A pleasure short thou seekst,
procuring lasting paine :
A poyson sweete thou dost imbrace, that fundry wightes haue flaine.
A dore that lets in Death,
a scourge that whips the soule :

to sundry purposes.

A vice that Vertue ouerthrowes, who doth it not controule.
A flame of burning fyre,
that reaues all reasons rules :
A gulfe of foule desire,
that oft makes wise men fooles.

¶ To I. N.

Good wyll put forth my Pen in haste,
and made me bolde to craue :
And Loue lay on me fore to seeke,
that I suppose you haue.
Pleasure drew forth my doubtfull care,
and helde my hande aright :
And Vse transported like a guyde,
the vaine desyre I wright.
Hope flattered fo these troubled thoughtes,
that comforte of the paine :
Would force me to appose thy pen,
with fanfies of the braine.
Slowe of it selfe my little skill,
but that thy truth profest :
Will pardon bothe my light offence,
and graunt this poore request.
To tell if ayre maye alter greefe,
or where like luck betide :
Thy selfe, that vnder Country Hauens, doste seeke thy selfe to hide.
And if loue bee, what thing it is,
if not, what moues my paine :
Good NEDHAM wryte, or come in haste,
and I shall wryte againe.

L.ij.

¶ H. To

Delightfull Discourses

¶ H. To his misbap.

THe Gallie slaue that stirres the fleeting Ore,
In foming Seas, to cut the mounting waue :
With heaueie cheere doth with the gladsome shore,
In hope that ende his thraldome then shall haue.
Or else doth hope amidst his pyning wo,
That ship will sinke, and ende his trauell fo.

The sickly wight whom Feuers pinche full fore,
With gasping breath, and panting hart in bed :
And yeelds himselfe content with Natures lore,
Reuoltes againe, who was by hope misled,
If vitall breath yet chaunce to fayle him than,
Now past his paine, becomes a happy man.

An ende of woes these feelie folks obtayne,
An ende of thrals at length by meanes they finde :
Deuoyde of cares, and I as wretch remayne,
To whom aliue the Gods aboue assignde.
That lyuing yet, a thousande times should dye,
And long time dead, vnburied yet should lye.

¶ Falsifying of Fayth, breedes many complaynts.

MY idle head retaynes the busie hope,
My gasing eye giues ouer her desyre :
My reaching hand would after fauor grope,
My legs yeelde vp and leaue me in the myre.
Tis light t'outrunne, but not to outread the wife,
Thus finde I strife to hinder my deuife.

The time too shorte, to weare so speedie greefe,
I still pursue, that shunnes my wylling holde :

Skill

to sundry purposes.

Skill is to weake to yeelde my woe releefe,
My cares lyke clowds, infect my hart with colde.
So that if heat should melt so cruell frost,
My heart were drownde, and all the loue were lost.

Betweene two Adamants of equall weyght,
I am the peece of yron to beholde :
Wythout desert, loe I am made the baight,
Denide the ioy that my desyres wolde.
My taste of loue, is lost as you may gesse,
That know how Sickmen fauour bitterneffe.

Who would his will, must beare the bitter lot,
The Faucons foote diftraynth the Princes hande :
When loue was made, his eyes were quite forgot,
The highest towers in greatest danger stande.
O slipper holde, that for a silly eye,
Can finde no peace, but euer seekes to die.

Die, and doe all the wretched traine of loue,
To know the torment of my boyling smarte :
Her might on me pore man she ment to prooue,
Whom I had thought, should heale my wounded harte.
O cruell penance to my pore desyre,
In such great heat to bring me to the fyre.

¶ To his Song, sent to his Mistresse.

Song in the sweete place,
Where as my Ladie was walking.

Thinke if thou shouldst stande,
She would reach out her hande, wylling.

Touch not her tenderneffe, Stoupe to her statelineffe, hie thee.

Delightfull Discourses

Spirite without carkeffe, MERCVRIE bodileffe,
 ply thee.
Tell her I will come,
Knowing not howe soone,
 speede well.
Loue may no let haue,
This is all I craue, farewell.

¶ A Poesie.

THe streaming formes, that fast on me doe flowe,
The secrete sighes that waste my wofull breast :
The Isie colde I feele like flakes of Snowe,
The hidden harmes that breede my great vnreast.
By Fancies force doe cause such troublous tyde,
That shyp nowe flakes, which late in roade did ryde.

¶ Answer.

WHere reason rules, affections fonde doe flye,
And bewties beames smale bittirnesse may breede :
Where wifdome will, by vertues skill doth tye,
CVRIDOS flames are quenched forth with speede.
Let reason then thy will by wifdome guyde,
So shalt thou safely shunne this stormie tyde.

¶ The vanitie of rytyches.

THe stately Pallace Princely plaste,
the hoorde of glyttering Golde :
The Patrimony large of landes, cannot from sicknesse holde.
Nor can they cure the crased corps,
or deck the minde at all :
For who hath most of such a store,
the more he feares as thrall.

Golde

to sundry purposes.

Golde is the Father to the Flock,
of Flatterers by lotte :
It is the summe of grieffe or woe,
who hath, or hath it not.
For who it hath, he quakth in feare, least Fortune robbe his thrifte :
Who hath it not, laments because,
he knowes not how to shifte.
Wherfore of ritch or poore I iudge,
as wisdome smale I hente :
In best estate is he, with his that liues with minde contente.

¶ Discorde makes weake, what concorde left strong.

THe quiet pause that silente night,
Doth bring from trauayles past :
Of daye no sooner had by sleight,
A slumber on me cast.
But in my sleepe there did appeare,
Sixe sauadge men in mosse and haire.

A Fagot bounde the foremost wight,
Me thought in hande did beare :
Which ioyntly and alone through might,
All fought to breake and teare,
Yet still in vaine their strength they tryde,
Eche parte to other was so tyde.

Till wresting long, a stick at last,
One forth by sleight doth wring,
Whereby the Bundell knitte so fast,
A funder soone they fling.
Then eche a seuerde peece doth spoyle,
Which late conioynde, no force could foyle.

L.iiij.

This

Delightfull Discourses

This done me seemde they vanish quite,
And there my Dreame did ende :
Yet so amazed with the fight,
That out a sigh I sende.
I curst the frawde that friends defast,
Whose broken bande eche harme doth haft.

The wrack of Realmes hereby is wrought,
The force of Foes increast :
The spoyle of famous Princes sought,
And right by wrong suppressed.
Foule fall therefore the guyle of those,
That friendships bande doe seeke to lose.

*And happy they that doe restraine,
Their eares to heare when Syrens faine.*

¶ Of one that came to borrow money.

IN loane what losse, I want and would,
Two Gods I bring to entreate for Golde,
Perswasion may procure the thing,
That force would vndertake to bring.

¶ Answer.

THe losse of Friends by bringing home againe,
Such Interest I seeke not so to gleane,
Two Goddes to match your Gods there be,
Inopie and Impossibilitie.

¶ Truth feareth no tryall.

THe Muses calde a Courte of late,
Wherein they deemde of sundry deedes :
To scan eche cause in seate they fate,
The summond peere and law proceedes.
The truth they fought of all mens harts,
And deemde of eche by his defarts.

So

to sundry purposes.

So some were faude, and some I sawe,
Condemde to dye by Iustice might :
Among the which by course of lawe
Approcht to barre a worthy wight,
Whome festred Enuy fought to spoyle,
By forged lyes his fayth to foyle.

Vpon whose talke he was araynde,
Holde vp thy hande quoth Doubt by name,
Thou art accused to haue staynde
Thy credite, and thy fayth with shame.
And brieft to be, by verdite iuste,
Condemde thou art for thine vntruft.

To whom the Captiue gan reply,
I graunt if this be prooued true :
That I well worthy am to dye,
And here I craue no more of you.
But perfitte triall of my case,
(The guiltie onely pleads for grace.)

A Queste was then impanelde newe,
And his accusers calde in fight :
Suspition did the sute pursue,
He was indited by Despite.
The Muses nowe with all the rest,
Made Conscience foreman of the quest.

Wherewith Suspition fled for feare,
Despite durst not maintaine his sute,
The cause was calde, the captiue cleare,
Thus did the last, the fyrst confute.
And he that earst should needes haue dide,
No trespassse made, when truth was tride.

Loe thus beholde, the guyltlesse wight,
Had Conscience not bene present tho :

M.j.

Through

Delightfull Discourses

Through false report and deepe despight,
Condemnde had beene to death to go.
By which you well may learne and see,
The faultlesse ofte condemned bee.

Let pittie therefore moue your minde,
To stay your doome till truth be tryde :
So you by search shall easly finde,
That I from truth did neuer flyde.
As tyme by triall shall declare,
I aske no more, so spoyle or spare.

¶ He complayneth his mishap, with promise to keepe her honor.

THe wandring Outlaw borne to woe,
and bred a banisht man :
Vntaught the futtle sleights of loue,
of loue this tale began.
When fyrst my fences dranke the sweete,
that gaue my body blood :
I felt no Foe to let my loue,
nor God against my good.
Tyll luste misreckned my delightes,
my wandring ioyes to ende :
And founde her out to stay such toyes,
to stande my trustie friende.
I boast the graunt if all were giuen,
it may, would God it might :
O happie man, more happie mayde,
if all had hit aright.
Mishap withholdes no meane to hope,
to purchase my pretence :
Beautie me rauisht first, and now reuength without offence.

Thus

to sundry purposes.

Thus like a childe agayne, vntaught
the sleightes of dayntie mindes :
Such nurture take I of my Nurse,
as Nature iustly bindes.
These sides enflurine her stately loue,
if other thoughts she haue :
She shall possesse that I professe,
and yet her honor saue.

¶ G. To his Ladye.

I See in loue some farther fetch there is,
Than reason can reueale to me that would :
Accuse the cause that makes me think amis,
And finde the fault of such vntempred mould.
Of sundry workes doe diuers wonders growe,
Yet skill shewes why, and how they should be so.

I see the Sunne both moue, and melt, and change,
At once both dry and dew the dustie sande :
Yet are the raging stormes of loue so straunge,
As I forbear the cause to vnderstande.
Except I should impute it to the wurst,
And curse the kinde that neuer Louer durst.

I see the starre that guydes my stirring loue,
The goodly Saint that sacrifice deserues :
Sometime I sayle, and sinke for feare to prooue,
And oft my solemne obsequies referue.
Yet but for loue her passing giftes deuine,
Nature had neuer made them halfe so fine.

I see the secrets of my wofull eyes,
Must seeke to rest on no such perfitnesse :
Would they had kept her still about the skyes,
Where first she tooke alluring comlynesse,
But sith her shape no mortall man may craue,
Yelde honor such as fittes her best to haue.

M.ij.

¶ For

Delightfull Discourses

¶ For smale offence, smale punishment.

MY Lady giues the reyne to her despite,
And lightly she beleecues what others fayne :
With death she vowes my seruice to requite,
And payes me not with like good will againe,
So that she seekes to trusse vp my good will,
With trusting those that euer ment me ill.

The murdring Knyfe for my offenceleffe crime,
I see preparte to gore my guyltleffe blood :
The cruell voyce of rough condemning rime,
Hath scape her mouth, and maye not be withstood.
Yet let her date my death with this one line,
Here lyeth my Seruant buried in his Shrine.

If mercie fayle, there is no other charme,
If that preuayle, vngracious luck farewell :
My guiltleffe trespasse shall escape the harme,
That enuye wisht on me to haue befell.
Of my estate, let her say yea, or nay,
I most regarde her doome for to obay.

From heauen the grace of gentle minds descends,
And like the maker should the matter bee :
Then let my Mistres when she wrath pretends,
Affects of mercie in the Gods foresee,
And when she graunts to follow them in that,
Let her recure and pardon she knowes what.

¶ Loues

to sundry purposes.

¶ Loues myghtinesse growes by Louers weaknesse.

IF power of warre had yeilded to renoune,
Of curteous hartes, the Gods had then agreeede :
Disgraded SATVRNE had not tumbled downe,
Nor loue had durst in Goldlike Artes proceede.
O cowardly Gods against your kinde to see,
Your felues, your fonnes, the flaues of loue to bee.

Could loue take league with LOVE against his will,
Or staine the streame of NEPTVNES water Springs :
And could not PLVTO keepe his honor still,
But giue the Heauens and Hilles to other kings ?
In faith the face amongst sweete soules should dwell,
That conquered thefe, in spite of powers in Hell.

¶ A comparison of his troubles.

GREAT swelling floodes are soone dried vp,
with meaner calmes I see :
And mightic Frostes, with gentle heate are woont dissolude to bee.
The darkest clowdes in th'ayre tost,
depart with no great winde :
Yet can the tempest of my care,
no quyet harbor finde.

¶ I. K. to H. being sicke.

THe sickly state, thou griped art withall,
When brute had blowne and founded to mine eare :
From eare to heart, the sodaine noyse did fall,
And there begins to change my choise of my cheare.

M.ij.

For

Delightfull Discourses

For choyce is past, needes must I match with mone,
When hope is crackt, what comfort may endure?
The best parte eke of me, to greefe is gone.
Scant then the partes beside, may well be sure,
Yet feare not H. quayle not, be of good cheare,
Thy Keeper bids thee haue a hardy harte :
Be lyke a man, the weather will be cleare,
If not for thee, yet cause not me to smarte.
So being bolde in thine extremitie,
Thou shalt faue two, that is both thee and me.

¶ Answer H.

THe plunged state whercin I restlesse lay,
When these thy lynes were brought before my view :
A certaine tyme began to cease and stay :
And still mee thought my pinching paine withdrew,
To heare from thee, such comfort did ensue,
But when at last, I learned had thy greefe,
My comfort fledde, bereft was all reliefe.

And then anewe my crased corps in paine,
Lay languisht long, not knowing what were best,
A thousand thoughts within my troubled braine
So mooude my minde, that vnneth could I rest,
The slypping ioyes that worldly wights possesse.
Loe then I sawe, full soone awaye did slide,
And nothing was, that still might stande or bide.

No Forte so strong, no Bulwarke rayfde so sure,
But tyme consumes and tumbleth downe at last :
Mannes force is frayle, and lyke the feeble flowre,
That bendes and breaks with euery little blast,
His dangers great, his pleasures soone surpast,
As now by me appeares, whose ioyes doe vade,
Whose griefe doth grow, whose comfort glides to glade.

Whose

to sundry purposes.

Whose lyfe lyke smoke, doth flylie slynck awaye,
Whose Rock is reelde, whose fatall threed is spunne,
Whose dreame doth ende, whose slumbring sleepe doth staye,
Whose web is wouen, whose Glasse is welnie runne,
Whose parte is playde, whose tale is tolde and done,
Whose will doth yeelde to leauē this wretched vale,
Where naught is fure, but driry Death most pale.

¶ Of Friendship.

WHo holds himselfe most deare, and hath his wante,
Although he would, he may not store his friend :
But he that seekes his secrets there to plante,
Where wealth is free, shall finde a quyet ende.
Giue me the poorest man to triumph on,
Or welthiest friend, or let me liue alone.

¶ Answer. G. H.

GIue me the equall friend, for greater state
Will euer grudge the wante of lowe degree,
And eke the meane repine at welthier mate,
Thus enuy breakes what friendship did decree.
By iuste agreeing porte no iarre doth grow,
Where wealth ne wante denies the friendly show.

¶ H. To M.

THe crased Barke full oft is saued by Pylots care,
The greatest griefes by pleasant ioyes asswaged are,
The daylie toyles by some quiet rest are alwayes eased,
The vering spirites by Musike sweete, seeme somewhat pleased.
My onely ioy regarde you this my wofull case,
Sith none but your disdaine, my sorrow can delace.

¶ Admonition to his Friend.

IF thou wilte be rightfull,
Alwayes stande thou faythfull.
To doe well be carefull,
Note friends and be thankfull.

Delightfull Discourses

Vaine talke flye and learne wit,
Marke wise ſpeeche and loue it.
Alwayes praye, and boaſt not,
Eſchue pride, and vaunte not.
Hate no man, diſdaine not,
Take time and ſleepe not.
Eche vertue trayne iuſtly,
Regarde betters wiſely.
Offend no wight wrongly,
And declare alwayes truely.
So God ſure will loue thee,
And good men will praife thee.
When Vertue ſhall grace thee,
All fame ſhall embrace thee.

¶ *Who ſeekes this Worlds felicitie,
Fyndes nothing elſe but vanitie.*

WHo ſeekes on earth to finde, his Manſion ſure to dwell,
Forſakes his God, forgets his heauen, & hies him faſt to hell.
For why no fleſh hath force, eternitie to finde,
But as of Clay it came, to Clay it muſt conuert by kinde.
If Bewtie blynde thine eyes, or Coyne it be thou craue,
Be ſure therof they clogge thy ſoule, whē carcaſſe comes to graue.
Not ſtrength, not honors ſtage, nor Empire helde alone,
But conſcience cleere muſt only ſerue, before the heauenly throne(.)
Suppoſe before thy Prince, thy onely tale ſurmounds, Tryumph not thou, for th'angels trumpe, calles thee to more accounts.
More pleaſure here thou takes, in toys on earth below,
More feeble thou, more force is theirs, to yelde thine ouerthrow.
No comfort doe conceaue, in vaine and tryflyng toys,
No minutes myrth can counteruayle, aye during deepe annoyes.
On earth the force of flood, and flame thou doeſt deſyre
To ſhun, then chiefly ſeek to auoyde, the force of endleſſe fyre.
On earth thou doeſt deſyre, delights that be but vayne,
In heauen the whylſt thou doſt neglecte, the ioy y^t ſhall remayne.
Then dye on earth to liue, and liue on earth to dye,
Repoſe thy truſt in heauenly things, and ioy eternallye.

to sundry purposes.

¶ To a Flatterer.

AS foundes from hollow things,
doe nought but ayre impleie:
So words from faythlesse friends,
shewe nought but flatterie.

¶ Answer.

CAlme Seas least feared bee, more daunger when they swell:
Yet in all Tydes we see,
they vse to founde them well.

¶ Reason and Fansie doe often varie.

WHere Fansie bids vs runne, and Reason staye,
And presse our powres, that frayltie nought preuayle:
Affection blinde doth beare so great a sway,
That we in greatest danger hoyse vp sayle.

We burne our selues, and yet doe blowe the fyer,
And trust the ayde that leaues vs in the myer.

Desyre assayes with Fancies winges to flye,
When hap withholdes, to yeelde our will successe:
Hope would aduance it selfe vnto the skye,
Despayre sinkes downe, and fits in sad distresse.

Desyre, dispayre, hope, hap, by fansie prest,
Thus ioyne their battayle in affections brest.

Reason resistes, vayne hope, hopes Lead will swymme,
Wyt would preuayle, affection will not yeelde:
Desyre with Frayltie ventures lyfe and lymme,
Inforcing Reason to forsake the field.

And thus with Fancies lore our reason ledde,
In Follies brake, we oft bring fooles to bedde.

Looke ere you leape, beware least footing sayle,
Example take by poore ACTEONS fall:

We thinke that pretie fansie may preuayle,
And therefore listen to his luring call.

But when most greedie Dogs doe vs deuour,
Fancie stands aloofe, not able to succour.

Delightfull Discourses

A little bewhing Curre doth oft procure,
Assault of greater Dogs, as doth appeare,
So while we rashely yeelde to Fanfies lure,
More eger Currees are readie vs to teare.

Our owne desyre, affection, lust, and will,
Are those same Dogs which doe their maysters kill.

Yet neyther counsayle, wisedome, fence, nor arte,
Can brydle youth from his desyred ioye :
Graue precepts haue no power to staye his harte,
From working of his owne extreme annoye :
And though our selues doe know such things are vayne,
Yet doe we seeke the selfe same things to gayne.

What madnesse thus to stryue against all sence ?
To sue, where Reason would we should refrayne :
Against all counsayle thus to make pretence,
And voyde of wisedome so to beate our brayne,
To buye repentance with so deepe desyre,
And with such heate to set our thrift on fyre.

And yet no helpe, when Fansie freights our boate,
But Follyes force, perforce will hoysse vp sayle :
Till midst the waues of had I wist we floate,
We thinke our pleasant course should neuer fayle.
Vnlesse Gods speciall grace doe make a stay,
Our nature weake thus works her owne decay.

¶ A Poesie.

Sith nothing staves in good or happy state,
Where Vice aboundes and Vertue doth abate :
Why doe we not our lyues with speede reforme ?
That Conscience cleere may feele no gnawing worme.

¶ Certaine

to sundry purposes.

¶ Certaine Verses translated out of Petrark, concerning Rome, written by him many yeares since.

A Flame from Heauen streame downe vpon thy head
Thou wicked one, that from the water colde,
And Acornes wilde, (that whilom was thy bread)
Arte mightie made, enrichte by others Golde.

Since thy delight is setled all on ill,
Shame thee destry, and forrow soone thee spill.

Thou Nest in whome the treasons hatched are,
That through the worlde abroad are spred this hower :
Slaue to Wine, chambring and delicious fare,
Where Lust doth trye the strenght of all her power.

In Closets thine, yong gyrles and aged Siers,
With BELZABVB doe daunce in foule desiers.

He Bellowes, Fyre, and looking Glasse doth beare,
Amidst them all, but why I blushe to tell :
Naked to wyndes, and bare foote late thou were,
No beddes of Downe vnto thy share befell.

Course clothes did serue thy corps from colde to shrowde,
Scarce God thy peere, thou now art growne so prowde.

Thou BABILON that buyldes thy Neast so hye,
By courtous frawde thy sack to brimme dost fill,
With Gods great wrath and vices out that flye :
Whose poyfning smell a worlde of foules doe kill.

Gods to thy selfe thou makst, not LOVE nor PALLAS,
In VENVS and BACCHVS is all thy solace.

In searching long, what should of thee ensue,
My selfe with toyle I feeble brought and lowe :
But at the length mee seemde a SOLDAN newe,
I sawe preparte to worke thy ouerthrowe.

That will erect BALDACC feat for those,
Which (though not when I would) shall thee depose.

M.iiij.

Thy

Delightfull Discourses

Thy Idols on the grounde shall scattered lye,
Thy Towers prowde to heauen that enimies bee :
And Turrets all by fyre downe shall flye,
Then shall iust foules the friends of vertue, see
 The golden worlde anewe beginne to raigne,
And auncient works shew forth themselues againe.

Thou forrowes source, the sinke of many a one,
Thou Schole and Temple whence all errors growe :
Once ROME, but nowe that cruell BABILON,
For whom the worlde in teares doth ouerflowe,
 Exclayming on thy cursed wickednesse,
 Bewrapped in the vayle of holynesse.

O Forge of false deceyte, prison to yre,
Where goodnesse dyeth, and cuils all are bredde :
To those that liue, thou art a hellish fyre,
The ruine eke of many wretches deade.
 A wonder straunge though spared thou be yet,
 If Christ in fine not treade thee vnder feete.

Thy ground was fyrst on humble pouertie,
But nowe thy pride doth presse thy Founders downe :
Thou shamelesse strumpet seeking suffraintie,
Where rests thy hope? what in thy triple crowne?
 In thy adulteries or base borne rytches
 Begotte in guile? vaine are all such wytches.

Since CONSTANTINE may nowe returne no more,
The mournfull worlde that sighes thy state to see :
Consume and cut thee quick vnto the core,
That all to long is forst to beare with thee.
 Of Rome the fall, here Petrark doth vnfolde,
 As view they may, that list the same beholde.

In patientia victoria.

FINIS.

UNIVERSITY OF CALIFORNIA LIBRARY

Los Angeles

This book is DUE on the last date stamped below.

REC'D IN LIBRARY APR 2 1968 APR 25 1968 MAY 10 1968 THREE WEEKS FROM DATE OF ISSUE NON-RENEWABLE UCRL 68-1299 MAY 10 1971 RETURNED TO UCSE I.L.L. MAR 27 1974 OL JAN 10 1977	OL SEP 26 1968 OL MAY 10 1971
---	--	--

MC 10

3 1158 00119 0536

UC SOUTHERN REGIONAL LIBRARY FACILITY

AA 000 345 491 5

UNIVERSITY of CALIFORNIA

LOS ANGELES
LIBRARY

